Another Roosevelt?
Virgil's Prize Fight
Broken Heads
Earth Slowing Down

—By Arthur Brisbane

LAKEWOOD, N. J., April 28—Senator Wheeler of Montana says Governor Roosevelt of New York could be elected President on the power issue.

That issue would help. Canadians get power from Niagara for half the price paid by United States citizens for power from our side of the falls.

Canada has government ownership of power. We have private ownership and are told that our Government is neither honest nor able enough to manage business for itself, which may be true.

But many think that 100 per cent increase for the blessings of private ownership is too much.

Another Roosevelt President, elected by the other party would be interesting. There might be a series of Roosevelts, alternating families and parties, stretching out to the crack of doom, like the lines shown to Macbeth by the witches.

But it all depends on prosperity.

The full pocketbook would do for Hoover what the full dinner pail did for McKinley.

If business is bad, pocketbooks flat, and prosperity ebbing, about 1932, he will be elected who convinces the people that he can bring back good times.

A man whose business is big payrolls, like Young of General Electric, Sloan of General Motors, or John D. Rockefeller, might beat the professional politicians.

Today Italy begins celebrating the 2000th anniversary of Virgil's birth. The celebration will last six months. Mussolini is thorough.

Greatest of Roman poets, Virgil will be read, translated, expounded, after modern writers have all been long forgotten. It may be said truly that the Aeneid would never have been written had there been no Iliad and Odyssey to imitate. But Homer probably would never have composed his works but for writers preceding him.

We grow upon the remains of dead men, as trees grow on dead trees.

Dante, who chose Virgil as companion on his trip to the Infernal regions, always addresses the Great Roman as "Maestro." And Dante was one of the three greatest writers that ever lived, Homer and Shakespeare being the other two.

Italy calls Dante and Virgil the two greatest. Germany says Shakespeare and Goethe. France, Shakespeare and Moliere or Racine. Spain, Shakespeare and Cervantes.

There is no doubt that Shakespeare was first.

Sporting reporters might celebrate the day and improve their style by sending Virgil's description of the first fight between Dares and Entellus.

It's a good fight, heavyweight. The gloves, of raw ox-hide, are made heavy with metal. Entellus, old and stiff, reluctantly decides to fight, and throws down his gloves "made of seven huge ox-hides, all stiff with inswen lead and iron."

Those gloves Eryx wore when

Saved Allies From Destruction, Declares Former Premier of France

By PAUL PAINLEVE

Former Premier of France and Minister of War in the Ribot Cabinet in 1917 when the United States entered the World War.

Paris, April 27 (by cable).

WHEN the integral history of the American intervention in the World War is finally written, it will necessarily be divided into two phases, the first a phase of preparation, and the second the phase of participation. They are both beautiful phases, miraculous in accomplishment and the present and future generations of American citizens can always evoke them proudly.

To this grandiose work of preparation France more than any other allied nation, necessarily lent its aid, for it was at French ports that the American contingent had to land, it was on French acres that the Americans had to be installed and fight, it was in

Ex-Governor Produces Letter to Show That It Was Returned to Woman

Testimony that former Gov. John L. Bates used for his own purposes money given him for investment by a client, was introduced today in the Supreme Court hearing of disbarment proceedings against him.

It was charged that the former governor had turned the money, amounting to $7000, into his own accounts and had paid Mrs. Florence Bascall of Bay State rd., 1 per cent a month for the use of it.

Bates sprung a surprise by producing a letter written by Mrs Bascall to the grievance committee of the Bar Association, announcing the money had been refunded, and withdrawing her complaint against him.

He also introduced a second letter, written by her cousin, Atty. Henry M. Rogers, to the same effect, but was unable to establish

London Navy Pact Blights Hopes of Anglo-American Co-operation

Right Honorable Ramsay MacDonald, Prime Minister of Great Britain and chief of the British naval delegation at the London conference:

Now that the American delegation has started home, sir, it is not inappropriate to address with respect a few words to you, believing that we express the sentiments of the great mass of American people towards you

We must say, frankly and regretfully, Mr. Prime Minister, that the people of the United States discover in you one of their genuine disappointments.

You came to us last fall, and by the charm and apparent sincerity of your manner won us to believe that Britain at last had a premier liberal enough and, what is more important, wise enough to work towards the great objective of an agreement of English-speaking peoples on a basis of absolute equality.

Alas, our hopes were to be proved unfounded.

We based our expectations on your definite declaration, after conferring with the President at Rapidan (1) that America should "take parity, take it full and running over"; and (2) that you and President Hoover were agreed that England and America were to work for peace in their separate ways, America independently and in her own historic manner, and England in co-operation with the League of Nations.

Then we witnessed the spectacle of you, sir, agreeing with M. Briand to involve this nation through Secretary Stimson in a "consultation pact," which would have put us into a pernicious super-league of nations — a league of the most highly militarized and most incorrigibly warlike powers in the world.

Now we witness the further spectacle of the American delegation—thanks to you—returning to us with a mongrel and emasculated treaty which is definitely NOT naval parity with England, and which deprives this country of the right to build the kind of ships it most particularly needs -

America went into the London conference demanding a tonnage of cruisers equal to the British tonnage and consisting of the KIND of cruisers needful for the American navy with its lack of naval bases—10,000-ton ships of long cruising range.

Indeed, we departed from the Geneva conference of 1927 because England tried to force us THEN to build the smaller cruisers suitable to the needs of Great Britain, which has naval bases scattered over the world.

Now, sir, under your guidance, in which Americans had unfortunately misplaced confidence, the American demands are whittled down and the delegation sent back to us with permission to build SOME of the kind of cruisers we want, but THE REST must be the British type.

YOU AND YOUR FOREIGN COLLEAGUES HAVE FINALLY APPARENTLY SUCCEEDED IN PUTTING THROUGH YOUR PLAN TO SCRAP THE AUTHORIZED CRUISER-BUILDING PROGRAM OF THE AMERICAN CONGRESS FOR 23 LARGE CRUISERS, ALL TO BE BUILT BY 1934.

Five of them NOW MUST NOT BE BUILT AT ALL, you tell us.

The remaining three cannot be completed UNTIL 1938, when we may have 18 INSTEAD OF THE 23 WHICH CONGRESS SAID WE WERE TO HAVE BY 1934.

Do you, sir, consider THAT as "parity heaped full and running over?"

As a matter of fact, sir, are you not counting on America NEVER BUILDING UP TO PARITY? Do you not, really, agree with opinion of the British navy heads as expressed in a dispatch from London to the New York Times by E. L. James, dated March 27, where he speaks of

"... The talk often heard in London to the effect that the British admirals, as distinct from the British government, would depend more on the House of Representatives than on the Senate TO PREVENT AMERICA FROM ACHIEVING NAVAL PARITY WITH GREAT BRITAIN."

We all recall, Mr. MacDonald, that after you yourself in 1924 initiated the British 10,000-ton cruiser-building program which left us so far in the rear, you wrote an article in the Nation, an American pacifist weekly, in January, 1929, URGING THAT CONGRESS SHOULD NOT authorize the cruiser program then pending—a piece of British perfidy, Mr. MacDonald, and a piece of British arrogance and impudence.

We believe, sir, that the Senate will reject your revision of our naval program and your skillful provision to keep us inferior, for it is nothing less.

We believe that your double-dealing will prove to have killed the cause of Anglo-American co-operation, and Anglo-American co-operation, sir, is far more important to your country than to ours.

Our purpose is altruistic, but to your nation such co-operation would mean actual protection from the results of another great war, which might be disastrous to the British Empire and utterly destructive to England.

In fact, the Hearst papers feel assured, in making this positive prediction, that if England should be involved in another great war, as she is apparently determined to be, the outcome of the war will be first, the complete investment and blockade of Great Britain to the starvation point by hostile submarines; second, the partial destruction of London by aeroplane bombardment; third, the eventual occupation of England by the enemy, and the transfer of the capital of the British Emnire to Canada.

The Hearst papers have been ardent advocates of an agreement of English-speaking nations on the basis

HARD BOILED LEADERS IN 'SOLITARY' DUNGEONS

Columbus, O., April 28—Believed to have been pacified after their leaders had been placed in "solitary," unruly convicts at Ohio State Penitentiary renewed their revolt this afternoon, after 150 Columbus police reserves had been taken from the prison yards.

The convicts refused to obey orders of guards and refused to listen to Deputy Warden J. C. Woodard, who heretofore had held their confidence.

When it became evident that the convicts in the White City Idle House had decided to resume their mutiny, resulting in a campaign against Warden Preston E. Thomas, whose removal they demand, Col. R. S. Haubrich of the Ohio National Guard, went into conference with other officials to plan for coping with the situation.

FEARS BLOODSHED

The Rev. Albert O'Brien, Catholic chaplain, who came from the Idle House after the revolt was renewed, said "the situation now is worse than it has been. The convicts are very excited, and I fear that we will have bloodshed before this thing is settled."

Jeffe Demos, storekeeper of the prison, went to the warden's office and reported the situation inside was "very, very bad." He advised the warden to use tear gas on the prisoners in the White City wing and forbade them to go to work in the shops.

"NO MORE CONCESSIONS"

Warden Thomas after his conference with Col. Haubrich and other militia officials announced there would be "no more concessions" to the prisoners.

The convicts had refused to go to the mess hall for lunch and demanded food be taken to them. This demand was refused by the warden.

The warden said food would be taken to four condemned prisoners in "death row" and to about 60 tuberculin prisoners, but the other convicts would have to go to mess or they wouldn't eat.

More than 25 hard-boiled convicts, leaders of the revolt, had been removed from the Idle House to solitary confinement by Columbus police and prison guards.

Machine guns, briefed on the prison yard as well as outside the walls, where Ohio National Guards were prepared to prevent any attempt to escape.

When a report was made that some of the Idle House men had cut a hole in the roof and had ropes for an escape, a machine gun was mounted on top of the cell block. Other guards went into the cellar to prevent any underground escape.

About 1500 convicts were in the Idle House today. Prison officials

Did you see it?

From house tops, from the roofs of office buildings and from the street, Greater Boston's army of amateur observers gazed skyward through smoked glass this afternoon to witness the eclipse of the sun.

Throughout the continent over the same period between 3:17 and 5:37 p. m. when the fleeting shadow of the moon was thrown against the sun, millions of observers, men, women and children, gazed heavenward at a slightly darkened golden orb.

Conditions over Boston were excellent for both official and amateur observers with a practically cloudless sky and only a slight haze.

BEGAN AT 3.17 P. M.

Earth was darkened noticeably as the moon came between it and the sun at 3:17, the reflected shadow moving gradually across the sun's face to an eclipse 58 per cent total.

It was impossible to see the shadow without some kind of colored glass and everything from the finest astrological instruments to the apparatus of the veriest novices small piece of glass smoked by a match flame—was in use.

With a siren erected on top of one of the Harvard Observatory buildings sounding its warning by means of electric clock machinery every 30 seconds, four observers simultaneously recorded the eclipse of the sun at half-minute intervals.

The work at Harvard was in charge of Professor E. S. King, who together with Messrs. Campbell, Millman and Sayer, were stationed at the five six, eleven and fifteen-inch telescopes at the observatory.

OBSERVE EXACT MOMENT

The purpose of these observations was to determine the moment of first and last contact; that is, the exact fraction of a second the moon came between the sun and the earth at 3:17, and the exact time it will have disappeared at 5:37. The eclipse was darkest here about 4:30.

The observers hope by these de-

Ask Hoover Pardon for Malden Woman

Washington, April 28 (AP)—Rep. Underhill, Massachusetts, and Bernard Ginsberg of Massachusetts Legislature today petitioned President Hoover to pardon a mother of seven children who was sentenced to serve 18 months in prison for possession and manufacture of liquor.

One of the children, Underhill said, has tuberculosis, another heart trouble, and the youngest was born July 9, 1929. The woman, Mrs. Pearl Kunnis of Malden, was sentenced Jan. 16. It was her first offence.

VANDERBILT'S YACHT BLOWS UP

New York, April 28 (AP)—A terrific explosion in the engine room of Cornelius Vanderbilt's yacht Winchester, lying off the New York Yacht Club in the East river at 26th st., today blew part of the deck high in the air and set fire to the boat.

A crew of 20 was aboard.

Fire tugs rushed to pump water into the burning craft, which was anchored in the middle of East river.

Bellevue Hospital and other buildings along the waterfront were shaken by the explosion.

The yacht's aft deck, the after mast and the deck awning were thrown high into the air and a column of flame shot through the hole in the torn deck. Witnesses said pieces of wreckage were blown 100 feet in the air.

The yacht is valued at more than $500,000.

OHIO PRISON CHAPLAIN WARNS OF BLOODSHED AND MUTINY

'SITUATION NOW WORSE THAN EVER'

Revolt Flares Up Anew When Police Are Withdrawn From Yard claimed a majority of these were not involved in the passive resistance campaign, but that many of the prisoners said most of the men were participants in the campaign.

PLACED IN SOLITARY

Charles (Chuck) Quinlan and Murray A. Wolfe were among those placed in solitary.

When Deputy Warden Woodward called them from the Big House, those remaining began hooting and cat calling. Quinlan and Wolfe admonished them to "cut it out and keep quiet." Quinlan is serving a term for robbery and Wolfe for forgery.

Both were removed to a dungeon called "the hole."

A third leader of the rioting convicts to go into "the hole" was Joe Muzzo of Wauseon, O., who is serving one to 5 years for robbery.

Warden Preston E. Thomas said the stand he had taken reminded him of famous statements made by former president of the United States.

Like Coolidge, he said, "we do not intend to run from these convicts." like Wilson, "our watchful waiting policy is at an end," and like Roosevelt, "we will speak kind words but will carry a big stick while speaking them."

Today's disorders followed a night of turmoil in which hundreds of convicts ripped off cell doors and caused much other damage including the smashing of many windows.

Machine guns were trained on the penitentiary from National Guard headquarters across the street and all prison exits were closely guarded by soldiers.

The police were armed with side arms, riot clubs and tear gas bombs.

Forty new prison guards employed to augment the regular forces joined the policemen.

Indications were that real trouble was expected if the convicts refused to go to work and end their passive resistance against Warden Thomas, whose removal they have demanded since last Monday's fire, in which 320 prisoners died.

DRIVE AGAINST WARDEN

Leaders of the convicts have declared they seek nothing but the removal of Thomas, whom they charge with brutality.

Last night's uproar, a recurrence of similar manifestations, the rest, followed announcement that the 40 new guards would be placed on duty today.

Night Capt. H. E. Laughery said the disturbance was the result of the convicts objecting to being locked in their cells.

Before daylight today, convicts were seen pacing their cells in apparent excitement and it was believed they had learned through their mysterious grapevine telegraph that today might climax the week of bedlam that followed the fire.

that they had been sent prior to the start of hearings on his case.

The testimony regarding the alleged misuse of the funds was given by Raymond T. Parker, secretary of the grievance committee of the Boston Bar Association, which brought the disbarment proceedings against Bates.

It was given after the elderly former governor and William G. Thompson, chairman of the grievance committee, had clashed and Judge Sanderson had ordered Bates' remarks stricken from the record.

Under direct examination by Atty. Robert G. Dodge, who is prosecuting the case, Secretary Parker told of statements made by Bates before the committee in regard to the case of Mrs. Hascall, widow of one of his close friends. Her husband was Lee Claflin Hascall, co-trustee with the former governor of Boston University.

NO FORMAL STATEMENT

"Governor Bates," said the witness, "made no formal answer to my request to furnish his version of the charges filed with the committee by Mrs. Hascall. I showed him a copy of Mrs. Hascall's letter and he said there must have been a mistake, that she had visited his office for advice more than 100 times and he had charged her a rent. That he made many profitable investments for her and had paid her 12 per cent on the money she had handed over to him for investment.

"When Mr. Bates appeared at the hearing he admitted he had received cash and bonds and confessed he had not invest. I them. He said he used the money for his own purposes and had paid her one per cent a month for the use of it.

ON OTHER CHARGES

Referring to the committee action on the complaint of Mary E. G. Butler and her sister, Blanche, of Wenham, that they had lost $13,000 turned over to Bates, the witness said the police was sent to Governor Bates in November of 1925.

Parker said he never received from Bates any formal denial of the charges contained therein.

He described a statement by Bates made at the hearing on January 11, 1929, as follows:

"The Governor said at this hearing that the Butler money had been invested in mortgages under their name. He declared some of the papers had been mislaid."

Arthur D. Hill counsel for Bates, later said:

"In point of fact none of those funds have been in mortgages. They have remained either in his own account or in the account of his law firm."

of absolute equality "to preserve peace between themselves and to promote peace throughout the world," and have carried that streamer at the head of their editorial columns.

During the progress of the recent naval conference the Hearst papers said:

"Let the GOVERNMENT OF THE UNITED STATES and THE GOVERNMENT OF THE BRITISH EMPIRE discuss the details of naval parity which both seem agreed upon and which may be the one overwhelming influence to maintain the peace of the world and to preserve the white race from self-extinction and suicidal conflict."

But the Hearst papers have utterly lost faith in the sincerity or perspicacity of English statesmen, and until England, either through revelation, education, or bitter experience, can come to have the same broadmindedness, foresightedness, and enlightened sense of self-interest as the more progressive dominions, the Hearst papers withdraw from their list of editorial objectives the plan of co-operative agreement with England, and substitute the wiser plan of Washington—

Peace and amity with all nations. Entangling alliances with none.

CONRY CHARGES PUBLIC FUNDS WASTED

Flays Metropolitan District Commission in Two Addresses

The metropolitan district commission was accused of waste of public funds in the construction of the Cottage Farm bridge and general incompetency, by Joseph A. Conry, Boston traffic commissioner, speaking at a communion breakfast of the John Henry Newman Court, M. C. O. F., in Everett, and before the Winthrop Women's Catholic Club in Hotel Westminster.

From an original appropriation seven years ago, he said, of $750,000 to erect the bridge, the total cost jumped to $1,850,000. The commission asked $250,000 every two years for six years and got a final $300,000, part of which paid expenses incurred before appropriation was made.

Davis R. Kenison, chairman of the commission, last night explained that the first $750,000 was for the bridge alone. The commission's planning division recommended placing a railroad structure under the bridge.

Then it was desired to cut out the fill on the Cambridge side and additional money was required. The bridge design then did not agree with Boston & Albany railroad requirements, and a change was made, he said. Finally, the appropriation was exceeded by $40,000 to complete the project, and this, with interest on money, brought the cost to $1,850,000.

tailed observations to be able to correct their knowledge of the moon's motion, which they know from current observations is subject to constant variation. This amounts to about one-tenth of a second. Their studies today will tell them just how far ahead of or behind the moon is in its course.

An interesting and unusual feature of the eclipse noticed by many careful watchers was the large sun spot that was clear to the naked eye. It will disappear in about another week in its path across the sun.

The elements of first and last contact were studied by the Harvard observers by the Innes method of chords, whereby the length of the chords produced by the moon's progress on the surface of the sun at stated intervals in this case every 30 seconds.

PLANES IN USE

To the large observatory telescopes are attached solar eye-pieces through which the sun is observed directly by reflected light. These eye-pieces are a system of prisms which are placed between the eye and the telescope lens and deflect all but a small amount of the light, which would otherwise be of blinding intensity.

Various groups of noted scientists were waiting along the path today where the eclipse was expected to be total.

Astronomers of the Lick observatory expedition were stationed at Camptonville, Yuba County, Cal., where two powerful spectographs, three photographic telescopes, a chronograph and a short wave radio set were installed.

At this point Dr. H. M. Jefferson went aloft in an army plane to photograph the eclipse from the shadow. The plane flew to the height of two miles.

In the same vicinity were expeditions from the University of Nevada, Johns Hopkins University and the University of Santa Clara.

BUTLER WANTS U. S. TO HELP INDUSTRY

Urges Right to Co-operate So That Production May Be Regulated

William M. Butler, candidate for the Republican nomination for United States Senator, addressing the Rotary Club at Malden today, favored giving industry the right to co-operate under a governmental agency like the department of Commerce, for the curtailment of production.

He referred to the aid given the farmers by the government, and asked why something can't be done for business if this is to be the policy of the government.

"It is evident something should be done if possible to ward off the effects of disastrous conditions in business, which occur from time to time," he said.

"We are now suffering from a period of overproduction. In its wake it has brought on disastrous competition in very many industries.

"It would be appropriate for the government in the common interest to provide some way in which business may be aided and the country saved such periods of depression. It is a matter to which I have given much consideration."

U. S. TAKING TO 'DOPE,' SAYS LA GUARDIA

New York Anti-Dry Campaigner Talks After Symphony Hall Meeting

Prohibition is tending to make the United States a nation of drug addicts, Congressman Fiorello LaGuardia of New York declared last night following a meeting at Symphony Hall at which he assailed the breakdown of enforcement and the report of the President's crime commission.

"So great has been the increase in the number of dope addicts since the advent of prohibition that the Federal government has found it necessary to authorize the establishment of two narcotic farms to take care of them. This is the first time in history that the government has taken active steps to combat the inroads of drug addiction," he said.

REPEAL IS SOLUTION

The solution lies in the repeal of the prohibition amendment to afford the government an opportunity to fight this evil with the breaking of public opinion, he said. The fight will be comparatively easy since the manufacture of dope requires an elaborate and costly equipment, he pointed out.

The Garrett case also drew the fire of the militant lawmaker as he prepared for his return to the national capital.

"I have heard of policemen entering almost every sort of business but this is the first time that I have heard of one becoming a milkman. But the Garrett case only shows what is going on in every police station in every city, town and hamlet in the United States," he said.

MILLION GRAFT A DAY

The cost of enforcing the prohibition law in 1919 was $300,000,000, he said, and this year it will be $4,000,000 and next year $500,000,000 La Guardia asserted. He added that a force of 250,000 men would be required to attempt to enforce prohibition properly.

La Guardia charged that $1,000,000,000 in graft goes to federal, county and state officials throughout the country every day.

La Guardia argued that party lines be forgotten in future campaigns and that every voter cast his ballot as a wet or a dry and not as a Republican or Democrat.

"Let us accept the challenge of the drys," he said. "There is no great political issue confronting the country except prohibition.

"There is only one way to do it. It cannot be done along political lines. Between the bootlegger on one hand and the fanatical professional drys on the other, the bosses of both parties are afraid to make it an issue.

LADY ASTOR MAY LOSE HER SEAT

London, April 28 (INS)—Lady Nancy Astor's favor of prohibition may cost her her seat in the House of Commons at the next general election.

This became more than a probability when it was learned that the liquor interests intend to make a great effort to defeat her.

F. A. McQuisten, Scottish M. P., was making a speech on the liquor traffic when Lady Astor interrupted him.

In anger he turned on her and said:

"I must remind the noble lady, that she has no interests in sources, most of which come from New York, she nearly lost her seat at the last election."

"I prophesy with absolute certainty that she will lose it next time. I would be sorry to lose her because she is the one bright spot of color in this very drab institution."

Suspended Fireman Hit by Auto; Dies

Lowell, April 28—Martin J. Slattery, member of Fire Truck Co. 1, was fatally injured today when he was struck by an automobile operated by John F. Sheahan of Quebec st.

Slattery was suspended from the fire department a month ago for 90 days on charges of conduct unbecoming a fireman.

He was crossing Gorham st. when hit by the machine.

ECLIPSE AIDS SCIENCE IN SOLVING MYSTERIES OF SOLAR SYSTEM

SUN COVERED BY MOON TODAY

Phenomenon to Be Completed Within Second and a Half; Earth in Shadow

The following article on the eclipse was written for the Universal Service by Dr. W. W. Campbell, retiring president of the University of California, and famous astronomer.

— Campbtonville, Cal., April 28 (AP)—Rain, which was falling at 7 a. m. P. S. T., caused apprehension among the large group of scientists gathered here to photograph the eclipse of the sun. Slight hope was held, however, that the sky would clear by the time totality begins.

By DR. W. W. CAMPBELL
Written Expressly for Universal Service

Berkeley, Cal., April 28. When there is a total eclipse of the sun, it offers an opportunity that is not available at any other time to study the conditions that exist in the surface strata of the sun.

Today a total eclipse of the sun will be visible to observers stationed along a path running in a northeasterly direction across California, from about six miles north of Mt. Tamalpais to near the southern end of Honey Lake, then continuously across Nevada and on to Butte, Mont.

Only the tip of the moon's conical shadow will graze the earth. So the path over which it falls is scarcely more than half a mile in breadth.

And it is only at points within this narrow margin that the sun's light is to be totally cut off.

MUST WORK FAST

The period of the totality of the eclipse this time is very brief; it will be nearly a second to a second and a half. But 99 per cent of the sun's disc, or photosphere, will be concealed for a longer time to observers who are as far south of the shadow path as San Francisco and as far north of it as Santa Rosa.

During the total eclipse the astronomers will make observations that may reveal the composition and arrangement of the various elements in gaseous forms that constitute the outer layers of the solar sphere.

This study is made with the most promising results by photographing the spectrum of the extreme edge of the sun upon a continuously moving photoplate, as the moon—interposing between the sun and the earth—in its motion reduces the crescent of the sun to a thinner and finally zero thickness.

The time of the totality of the eclipse, about one second and a half, is too short to be favorable for the spectroscopic observation and study of the corona.

GOVERNED BY DISTANCE

It is governed by the relative distance of the sun, the moon and the earth. The explanation of the sun's eclipse is, that the moon interposes between the sun and the earth. Total eclipse means that the moon's disc covers the sun, cutting out solar light.

That can happen, despite the sun being larger than the moon, because the sun is so far off, compared with the moon, from the earth. The sun's diameter and distance exceed the moon's diameter and distance in also the same ratio.

Exact calculations of the totality period of the solar eclipse are difficult because the moon's motion is subject to gravitational pulls exercised by the earth and the other planets. Its orbit, like the earth's, is not an exact circle, but elliptical. Even the variations in the shape of the earth affect the motions of the moon.

CONES OF FLAME

The observances of the times of the occurrences of the various phases of a total solar eclipse are useful in giving further information about the motions of the sun, the earth and the moon, and also about the earth's shape.

Besides the corona, the halo around the sun, another very spectacular manifestation during the total eclipse is that of the sun's prominences.

These prominences are huge red flames, rising from the various points of the sun's surface. Sometimes they are hundreds of thousands of miles high and assume various shapes and sizes. They last from a few minutes to several hours at a time.

They represent mostly flames of the hydrogen gas and of calcium vapor.

On the earth, 92 chemical elements have been recognized; more than two thirds of these have been identified with spectrum analysis studies to exist in photosphere of the sun.

During the total eclipse, observations enable it to be determined how high above the sun's surface the various chemical elements reach out.

Social Rivalry of Two Beautiful Women Ends in Tragedy

Adele Ritchie, erstwhile star of the stage, shot Mrs. Doris Murray Palmer to death and then killed herself not under the influence of a suicide pact, a theory on which the police were working today, but in a jealous rage at the social supremacy which the younger woman was wresting from the still beautiful ex-wife of Guy Bates Post, the actor, in the art colony set of Laguna Beach, Cal., intimates of the two women insist.

Mrs. Doris Murray Palmer, a woman of many talents and hailed as the most beautiful of her sex in the art colony, had a warm friendship of long standing with Adele Ritchie. It lasted until Mrs. Palmer began to undermine the social leadership for which the actress had been striving since her retirement from the stage. "I would like to shoot her," Miss Ritchie was overheard to say several months ago. (International Newsreel photos.)

Another photo of Mrs. Palmer which reveals the charm that made her a social rival of Adele Ritchie despite the friendship that led the two women to sign their letters to each other "Your Best Girl." Police are working on several new clues and hope to solve case in few days.

ADELE RITCHIE HELD VICTIM UNDER SPELL

Letters Cited to Show Possibility of Suicide Pact With Mrs. Palmer

Laguna Beach, Cal., April 28 (AP)—Discovery among the personal effects of Adele Ritchie, erstwhile stage star, of a code telegram and a letter indicating the possible existence of a suicide pact with her friend, Mrs. Doris Murray Palmer, wealthy divorcee, today focused the hand for a renewed investigation into the deaths of the two women.

Morelle White attorney for Miss Ritchie, said the letter, addressed to him, indicated that her client contemplated taking her own life and that she was to be joined in the death plan by Mrs. Palmer.

One letter written by Mrs. Palmer to Mrs. Post said:

"I'm sorry you were so unhappy this visit. It makes me utterly miserable to have you so upset. But it is useless for me to try to convince you that I do not stray from the arms you locked over a year ago. It would seem that everyone but you knows that I live each day under your spell—striving to please you, thinking of you first in everything.

"Better far for both of us if I could find an absorbing interest. My poor attempt at drawing may be the answer. Drowning might be better. With the Love of Y. B. G."

The initialed signature. White said, meant "your best girl."

VOTE TODAY ON JUDGE PARKER

Washington, April 28 (AP)—The nomination of Judge John J. Parker as an associate justice of the Supreme Court will be brought before the Senate late today with a bitter controversy and a close vote in prospect.

For the second time this year a determined effort will be made to prevent the confirmation of one of President Hoover's appointees to the nation's highest tribunal, on the ground that it tends to increase the present majority of conservative opinion.

The nomination is vigorously protested by labor and negro organizations, the former contending Judge Parker is prejudiced against the working man and the latter that he has shown a bias against the negro race.

Beer Runner Slain in Jersey Rum War

Paterson, N. J., April 28 (AP)—The name of "Big Mike" Bredden was added today to the death list in the beer war which has torn North Jersey gangdom for months.

Bredden breathed his police as a bullet sped over their heads from the car of Jimmy Jones, proprietor of a roadhouse, in Little Falls township, was shot to death with a sub-machine gun behind the roadhouse yesterday.

Plane Victims

Geneva Brockett

Bruce Heffler

Geneva Brockett, 14, of Suffield, Ct., and Bruce Heffler, 14, of Greenland, N. H., were burned to death at Portsmouth, N. H., when the plane in which they were flying crashed. The pilot, Clyde L. Robinson, thrown from the plane as it landed, was burned trying to rescue the children. (Staff photos.)

CHILDREN DIE IN AIR CRASH

Portsmouth, N. H., April 28—Two children were burned to death when an airplane crashed here yesterday afternoon, despite the efforts of the pilot who tried to walk burned in an attempt to save them.

The children are Bruce Heffler, 14, of Greenland, N. H., and his cousin Geneva Brockett, 14, of Suffield, Ct. The pilot of the plane was Clyde Leon Robinson, of Exeter.

The two children died strapped in their seats. Pilot Robinson was thrown out of his seat when the plane crashed.

James H. Kelly, who with R. L. Dobbins, a new world's endurance record at Fort Worth, Tex., in May, 1929, by keeping their ship aloft more than 172 hours, met death with two others when a plane fell near Alvord, Tex. Herbert F. Wake, aerial aviator, died from injuries received when an airplane turned over on the Michigan estate of Wolff Durant.

Seven persons were killed and 19 injured when a plane nosedived into a crowd at Fayetteville, Tenn.

A pilot and a friend were crushed to death in an accident near Milwaukee.

Believes 2 Innocent in Smith Bros. Death

Muskogee, Okla., April 28 (AP)—Although two automobile traveling companions of David and George Smith, both of Connecticut, who were shot dead in a hotel here Saturday were still detained by police today, Sheriff Fred Hamilton said he believed them innocent.

John L. Wike, Sharon, Ct., and P. G. Seeley, Washington, Ct., the two detained, asserted the Smith brothers were killed by two robbers who entered the hotel room.

Whole World Solicitous for Mrs. Lindbergh

New York, April 28—The solicitude of the entire world hovers over Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh today in the mansion of her parents at Englewood, N. J., where she is awaiting the arrival of the stork, now expected the middle of May.

Mrs. Lindbergh is being guarded from even the mild thrill of opening the thousands of cheering messages pouring in from every quarter of the globe.

She will fly no more until after the arrival of the world's most famous baby, having been warned by the five California physicians, who had disagreed about allowing her to make the recent transcontinental flight with Col. Lindbergh.

Although reservations were made for her at the Fifth Ave. Hospital for tomorrow, April 29, have not been cancelled, it now appears that this was only a precautionary measure.

Mrs. Lindbergh's obstetrician, Dr. Ralph Lohenstine, has altered plans for a trip to Europe because of the delay, friends declared today.

Until Mrs. Lindbergh is brought to the Fifth Ave. Hospital she will remain under the direct care of the Morrow family physician, Dr. Walter Phillips of Englewood.

Her father, Dwight W. Morrow, Mexican ambassador and delegate to the London naval parley, will arrive Wednesday on the Leviathan.

Her husband starts home from Central America next Thursday.

Lindy to Hop Back to America Thursday

Cristobal, Canal Zone, April 28 (AP)—Charles A. Lindbergh rested here today after having written a a 10 hour and 31 minute flight from Havana yesterday another chapter in man's conquest of the air. He will start home Thursday.

Leaving Havana at 5:33 a. m., Lindbergh set his big Sikorsky plane down at Puerto Cabezas, Nicaragua, at 11:37 a. m., and 35 minutes later took off for France Field, here, arriving at 4:04 p. m., several minutes ahead of the schedule he had set for himself. The distance flown was 1038 miles.

TWO KILLED IN INDIAN RIOT

Bombay, India, April 28 (AP)—Two Indians were killed and three wounded in Madras Sunday, when British police opened fire upon an unruly mob. The rioters stoned the police, injuring both the commissioner and his deputy, and others. Orders to disperse were answered with more stones, and finally the police opened fire.

Elsewhere in India there was a week-end of comparative quiet. Mahatma Gandhi, marching with devotees to capture what he says are the government salt pans at Dharsana, continued to preach his doctrine of non-violence and to deplore the recent rioting.

LOWELL CENSUS LOSS, 12,709

Lowell, April 28 (AP)—This city lost 12,709 inhabitants or 11.3 per cent of its population in the last 10 years, an announcement from Colin C. Macdonald, census supervisor, made known today.

The comparative figures are 112,758 for 1920 against 100,000 for 1930.

The loss is attributed largely to the textile depression that has gripped New England for 10 years and more. Another factor was the extinction of the cartridge and munition industry that centered in Lowell for several years after the war, but closed down completely subsequent to the 1920 enumeration.

Northampton, April 28 (NSS)—This city, "home town" of Calvin Coolidge today showed a decrease of 378 in a comparison of this year's federal census figures and those of the state census of 1915. The totals were 1930—23,217; 1925—23,145, federal census of 1920—21,931.

LOWELL SHIP OFFICER WINS DIVORCEE

Rome, April 28 (AP)—The former Mrs. Agnes Church, divorced from Francois Church, son of Ribu Church, is spending a honeymoon here with her new husband, Elmer Smith, former third officer of the steamship Leviathan, whom it is now revealed she recently married at Singapore.

The former Agnes Biggins, one time telephone operator, was married in Honolulu, N. J., Jan. 26, 1925, to Francois Church of the baking soda family.

Mrs. Church obtained a decree in Reno on Nov. 15, 1929. Dispatches from Reno said she received a draft for $10,000 before her departure as the final payment of a $50,000 settlement made her for getting a divorce to salvage the Church family.

1000 SLAIN BY CHINA BANDITS

Shanghai, April 28 (AP)—Chinese press dispatches received today stated that 1000 men, women and children Chinese country folk were massacred and 1000 more captured Saturday by bandits, who looted and burned the town of Kingsuchen on the northern border of Kiangsi and Anhwei provinces.

The bandits, said the advices, displayed ferocity that was unparalleled in the annals of banditry in China. One hundred of the bandits mounted on horses set up 20 machine guns and raked the streets, mowing down the helpless villagers.

Former Champion Rifle Shot Dead

New Haven, April 28 (AP)—D. James E. Stetson, retired physician, once regarded as a champion rifle and pistol shot, is dead here at the age of 86.

In 1881 Dr. Stetson was graduated from Yale Medical School. He was a major in the National Guard and a member of the Union League Club, of which he was president from 1908 to 1911. He was born in East Hampton, April 24, 1844.

BOY FLIER IS OFF ON COAST HOP

Westfield, N. J., April 28 (INS)—Frank H. Goldsborough, 19, hopped off in his plane American Boy from here today at 6:40 a. m. in an attempt to set a new junior transcontinental flight record. He is the son of Bryce Goldsborough, who disappeared with the Dawn, Mrs. Frances Grayson's ill-fated transatlantic plane.

His destination is Los Angeles. At the start from here he had 34 gallons of gas. He expected to reach Columbus, O., by 10:40 and after refueling hop off for St. Louis, where he will spend the night.

BISHOP CURLEY ASKS FAIR TEST OF DRY LAW

Washington, April 28 (INS)—Archbishop Michael J. Curley of Baltimore believes prohibition should be given a fair trial.

"If prohibition has failed, it has been because there has been no wholehearted enforcement," he told 8000 members of the Holy Name Society at the Catholic University here.

"The best way to repeal a bad law is to enforce it, and we should give it a fair trial if for nothing more than an experiment. A law should not be obeyed because it is slavy but because it is for the common good.

"With all the contention and argument about our present system of laws, there is a growing tendency today to forget God and grow more into worldly things, and that is what men of the Holy Name societies are trying to fight."

Archbishop Curley also discussed the London naval conference, declaring that Scotland's love must replace tonnage figures.

"No peace movement has ever resulted in peace which was not founded on Christianity and we will never accomplish anything while we negotiate in terms of ships and tonnage."

BUSINESS IS ON THE UPSWING

Washington, April 28—A gain upswing in business and indust is reported in a survey by the National Business Survey Conference made public by Julius H. Barnes, its chairman.

The report was given out on the eve of the 18th annual meeting of the U. S. Chamber of Commerce, opening here today, choosing the general subject, "What's Ahead for Business."

BUILDING CONTRACTS UP

The survey is based on reports obtained from virtually every important line of business and industry in general, these reports show:

1—Large American industry fully carrying out the construction program forecast when the conference met last December.

2—A manifest adjustment of production of goods to current consumption.

3—Continued prudent merchandising in retail distribution.

Specifically, some of the highlights of the survey are:

New life insurance during the first quarter of 1930 exceeded any first quarter of any year, being about two per cent over 1929 level.

Assured highway conditions for 1930 indicate a total of $1,601,000,000 for state and local roads, as against $1,350,000,000 last year.

BIG RAILROAD PROJECTS

March production of Portland cement was 12 per cent over 1929, while crushed stone and sand were as heavy as in last year.

Report from the railroads show that capital improvements planned are proceeding on schedule and that total expenditures for the first quarter were 40 per cent greater than in 1929.

Employment in shipyards continues to be substantially above the 1929 level, while letting of ocean mail contracts insures a still further improvement during the second quarter.

Capital expenditures by the telephone companies were reported at 70 per cent in excess of those of the first quarter of 1929, while long-distance telephone business was 5 per cent heavier than in 1929.

BANDITS SLAY MAN IN HOLDUP

Baltimore, Md., April 28 (AP)—Six masked bandits shot to death a patron in the Bellinger Country Club, a roadhouse on Creek rd., near here, during a holdup early today.

The gunmen escaped after robbing the guests and rifling the cash register. The victim, William Wiseman, 39, of Camden, N. J., was shot near the heart when he offered resistance.

Seventeen persons, including employes, were in the roadhouse.

Girl Robber Gets 2 Years in Toronto

Toronto, Ont., April 28 (AP)—Toronto's first girl robber, 17-year-old Kathleen Doyle of Buffalo, today was sentenced to two years, less one day, in the reformatory when she pleaded guilty to a charge of robbery while armed.

Cecil Irving, 24, of Toronto, her brother-in-law, was given 15 years in Portsmouth and 30 lashes on the same charge. They held up a bank Thursday.

DAILY ANTIQUE

—No. 81—

The chest was without doubt the most important article of household furniture in the early Colonial home in America. It served for the storage of clothes, bedding, food and miscellaneous treasures. It could be turned into a cradle for visiting infants. It was an extra chair or bench, and it lent itself successfully to the simple decorative schemes of old New England homes.

The chest shown today is one of the most interesting American types to be seen. It is 17th century, painted and intricately carved. The painting was undoubtedly done first, and the carving was cut around the painted design.

This splendid specimen is in the Boston Museum of Fine Arts, and is a gift of J. Templeman Coolidge of Boston.

In connection with the Massachusetts Tercentenary Year, the Boston Evening American is publishing daily photographs of interesting antiques. Owners of genuine antiques, particularly of Colonial or early American origin or of historic association are invited to forward photographs and records for publication. If a photograph is not available, the American will send a cameraman to photograph the antique, provided the owner lives in Greater Boston. Address the "Antique Editor, 5 Winthrop sq., Boston."

WORLD FLIGHT PLANE READY FOR MEARS

Burbank, Cal., April 28—On June 1, John Henry Mears, globe trotter de luxe, will start from New York on what he hopes will be a new record setting round the world flight.

With him, as pilot, will be a famous Swedish airman—one of the aiders of European aviation.

The trip will take only 20 days of the most. The flyers will travel only by day, resting a few hours each night.

This was disclosed today when Mears accepted delivery of a speedy twin monoplane.

As he sits in the comfortable cabin Mears will typewrite his experiences exclusively for the Hearst newspapers.

These dispatches will be sent to himself over a radio set. They will be picked up, re-broadcast to the United States.

Mother Is Killed; Babe Is Unhurt

Middleboro, April 28 (AP)—Mrs. Rosie Jurczak, 30, of Central Falls, R. I., was killed and her husband, Stanley, faces court charges as the result of an automobile crash on the Cape Cod road near here late last night.

Stanley Jurczak and another occupant, Paulin Boskoski, South Bellingham, were arraigned in District court here this morning and admitted charges of drunkenness. Jurczak also pleaded guilty to driving recklessly. Mrs. Jurczak's 11-month-old baby, in her arms, and a son, 3½, escaped injury.

Husband's Average Income 4 A. M., So Wife Says

New York, April 28—The wide-eyed census takers that census enumerators faced just a bundle of grief on their daily rounds has been somewhat dispelled by certain takers here who found that often a smile was mixed with a tear.

One woman, it was reported, drove very hard to answer the census questions they were propounded to her.

"I can't tell you just what my husband's occupation is," she told an enumerator, "but his average income is $ a m."

"Reminiscing"

Here Comes the Stroller

—the jauntiest hat I have seen this season, I tell, of course—is a soft, featherweight felt with a magical brim that will turn into any shape you wish. You can make it droopy turned down—a roll in front—a tricorne. Shape it the way that suits you best, and I'll veouch you will never have a hat as becoming. It was made just to go with those swagger Greta Garbo coats, and sporty tweed suits. It's just the hat to pull over your curls for rumble seat driving — for golf or horseback riding. These dashing "Strollers" come in all headsizes—and in a glorious rainbow of colors —orange, blue, green, eggshell, violet, navy and black. They are a wonderful value at $4.90 to Wethern's, Temple Place thru to West St., and 1278 Beacon St., Brookline.

Evelyn Has a Way of selecting frocks just as if she were fairy godmother to them for herself—or someone she liked very much—and then tagging them at prices that make them seem like an Annual Sale! I know you'll never believe that some of the printed silks you'll find in her shop are only $6.95. And you'll think with thrift when you see her frocks at $7.95 to $12.95 and Bridesmaids' frocks of wispy "Point d'sprit"—and crisp taffetas with huge bows. Graduation dresses, too, are lovelies are also well taken care of —with flowered chiffons, and breezy organdies. There are some adorable new dot embroidered georgettes and tweed suits that you'll love for business. And if you are very early —and smart—you may get one of the stunning coats at $12.95. Chiffon stockings, $1.15; service weight, 98 cents. Evelyn's Dress Shop, 8 Winter St., 3rd floor.

If "Spick and Span" is your motto—and you revel in the joy of clean, fresh, well-pressed clothes, you'll be delighted to know the name of the cleansers who do the best cleansing possible—real high grade work at a minimum price. And prompt, and guarantee it. They assure you of that "out-of-a-bandbox look" which all the world admires so much. And not only that—but they save you the bother of carrying your things in bundles. They offer prompt call and delivery service. A simple telephone call brings their truck immediately to your door. If you prefer to mail your things to them they assure prompt Parcel Post return. And now the name of this concern who do such careful cleansing? It's Wenfield's, 231 Dudley St., Roxbury. Tel. is Highlands 4201.

The Instant Beauty

of Lillian Cunningham's permanent waving is something to talk about. You don't have to wait for a week or two until the "kink" works out, to enjoy the beauty of the wave — for there is no "kink" to a Lillian Cunningham's permanent. You see, she has four of the best known methods to choose from — Eugene, Nestle, Bond and Frederics, and will select the one best suited to the texture and condition of your hair. Whether you want deep, sleek ripples for long hair, or curly ends for a bob, the price is but $10. Twenty years' experience have taught her how to wave bleached, dyed or stubborn hair with success. Lillian Cunningham, 561 Boylston St., Back Bay 8068.

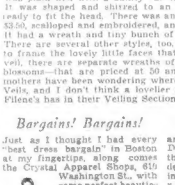
Here Comes the Bride and all the little bridesmaids, flower girls and ring bearers, and Anne, you'll be glad to know that the Misses Priscilla Price and Anne Price have been invited to the wedding of Miss Dorothy Ann Scott, daughter of Mrs. Frederick Scott, to Mr. Frederick Scott, Jr., on Saturday afternoon, May 3, at 4 o'clock at the Church of the Advent, Brimmer st. Mrs. Scott is giving a reception at the Somerset club following the ceremony. Miss Scott is a graduate of Miss Winsor's school, and Mr. Scott is a graduate of Harvard university. They will live at 30 Commonwealth ave. after their return from their wedding trip.

Bargains! Bargains!

Just as I thought I had every "best dress bargain" in Boston at my fingertips, along comes the Crystal Apparel Shops, 6½ Washington St., with some perfect beauties at two special prices —$4.45 and $7.45. These are not Sale Prices — but Special Prices which they are going to feature all the time. Really, the dresses are marvelous. Well, just think the newest and peppiest flowered chiffons with silk slips; graceful, beautifully colored georgette and flat crepes, tailored frocks, and tweed suits—at these low prices—$4.45 and $7.45. With your budget low after Easter—and an extra frock needed for business—you'll find this new "dress find" great news. The Crystal Apparel Shops are at 6½ Washington St., and 59 Temple Place, 3rd floor.



A Dress Without Cost!

Here's something that will make even the most indifferent shopper open her eyes and dash in town! Every day for the next ten days the New York Dress Mfg. Co. is going to select twenty frocks from their stock—and mark them down to $11 — of course you all know their dress values, which have already become so famous the New York Dress Mfg. Co. has been forced to expand their shop to take care of their customers comfortably. New spring frocks are coming in every day—and you'll find lovely white Graduation frocks, Confirmation dresses, quick silk ensembles, lace and georgette combinations, and three-piece tweed suits—all at $3.75 and $6.75 and worth three or four times as much. If you can duplicate them elsewhere at these prices, they will give you one without charge. The New York Dress Mfg. Co., 515 Washington St., 2nd floor (near West).

Little Sisters of Sunday School Age are deep in meditation these days—perfect cherubs, every one of them—for it's Confirmation—and First Communion time—again. And for me, how they enjoy the solemnity that goes with it—and the dignity of dressing up like diminutive brides. It's really their first step in "growing up," when their white dresses lose their babyday lines, and take on a "big sister look"—and when mother sighs and thinks of her wedding veil as she buys little sister's "confirmation veil." And truly, Anne, they do look like baby wedding veils, for the latest ones in Filene's are cut on exactly the same patterns as bridal veils—even to the cap and wreath! They are rounded or square, embroidered or lace trimmed. I saw one there at $1.50 that was really an awfully good value. It was plain net, with a dainty val lace edge at the shaped and shirred to a plain skirt, ready to fit the head. There was another at $3.50, scalloped and embroidered, and made with the cap attached. It had a breath and tiny bunch of orange blossoms at each side. There are several other styles, too, some of them imported. And to frame the lovely little faces that are softly frilled with a lacy veil, there are many of those tiny buds of orange blossoms—that are priced at 50 and 75 cents. I'm sure many mothers have been wondering where they could buy Confirmation Veils, and I don't think a lovelier selection could be found than Filene's has in their Veiling Section on the street floor.

Monday and Tuesday

are lucky days in Houghton & Dutton Co.'s Beauty Salon—for that's when they have their wonderful Hot Oil Special for $1.50 instead of the regular price of $2.50. There is nothing finer to put your hair in condition for your spring permanent than a hot oil treatment — for it makes the hair just oily enough—scours out the dandruff, and gives a beautiful gloss. Shampoo, and any wave you wish are included in this "special." Permanent waves, including shampoo and wave set are reduced to $8 and $10, as you like them. Inecto Notox—the hairdye that keeps youth in the hair, without telling the secret, is also applied here. Regular bobs, 50 cents; manicures, 75 cents; facial manicure, 40 cents. The Beauty Salon, 2nd floor. Tel. Cap. 6611.

Baby's Room

can be turned into a Land of Mother Goose, with all the friends of our baby days hobnobbing together on fresh, bright wallpaper —and at a surprisingly low price. For the Cohan-Grandberg, the wallpaper specialists, are running a special on decorative paper for children's rooms all this week. Every mother wants to make her baby's room as delightful as can be fresh—airy—and clean and this is a wonderful opportunity to "do it over" this Spring, at a cost that ranges anywhere from $4 to $15 for the entire room. If there is a gloomy room in your house that needs brightening—a gay lashly bright one that needs toning down, visit Cohan-Grandberg Co. They'll be glad to give you their expert advice—without obligation. They are at 36 Bromfield St. (Opp Province St.) Hub. 8419.

Did You Get A Hat

for Easter? Many waited until the "styles settled" to see what they really wanted—and now they demand one Baku at least to wear — and perhaps a lacy straw for evening. Jeanne Hat Shop has that delightful little spot where there are hats and prices for everybody. The most adorable handmade hats, molded to the head, in the season's popular straws at $5 and $10 — baku bankoos, and hair effects. You'll love their draped ribbon hats of taffeta and faille and their ready-mades in all the dashing brims flares and tilts about styles. And the best part is—you don't have to make a hurried lunch-hour shopping trip—for the Jeanne Hat Shop is open evenings, 280 Huntington Ave., next to the "Tent."

And Pleats, Too, for $1!

Out go spots and stains! Colors are revived! Pleats reappear! And it's no magician's trick, either. It's the splendid cleansing and pressing service which the Public Service Cleaners offer for $1 — with not a penny extra charge whether the dress is a skirt of knife-pleated chiffon, or a four-piece ensemble! One trip to their cleansing plant will bring back the freshness of youth to frocks that have grown "stale" in constant wearing—and inject a trim and swank to coats and tailored things that have become "boggy" from everyday use. And now, at this "specialties" shop you'll find a beautiful grade of to ley at $1. All silk chiffons, and service weight with lisle reinforcements. Hosiery repaired, 25 cents per stocking. Mail orders given special attention, at the Public Service Cleaners, 59 Temple Place, Rm. 703, Tel. Lib. 4198.

Those Painful Moments

you spend "tweezing" your eyebrows into shape—and sneezing over it, too—could all be eliminated in a few visits to Elizabeth Sparkes, for she permanently converts bushy eyebrows by to a slender arch with hair by hair electric needle. She is an experienced beautician who proves her capability. No matter where your eyebrows mars the appearance of your skin, Miss Sparkes can remove it—deftly, safely, painlessly, and forever! With the summer coming on—and sun-backs and bathing suits requiring a clear, unblemished skin, it would be well to start your visits to Miss Sparkes, now. She is at 120 Tremont St., Rm. 334, Tel. Han. 7392. Her prices are quite reasonable.

Virozol—the Last Thing

I put over my face at night to keep it thoroughly cleansed—and the first thing I use in the morning to wake it up! This

Swedish Face Bath is first of all a marvelous cleaner and astringent—then a wonderful stimulator. It stirs up the blood — making it work for the benefit of your skin. Try Virozol if you are bothered by blackheads — or an excessive amount of oil. You'll soon find that grimy, muddy look vanishing—and a clear, fresh, radiant complexion greets you. It's $1.25 a bo le. And there is a heavenly Virozol Face Powder to go with it (also $1.25). It is pure and fine, and comes in several lovely shades—the most popular are Egyptian Rose—a warm flesh tint—and a new suntan, called "Topaz." You can get them all in Filene's Toilet Goods Section.

Devotedly yours,
Priscilla

MAINE WETTER UNDER DRY ERA, DEWAR SAYS

Portland, Me., April 28—"After 70 years of State and national prohibition, Maine is today wetter than at any time in her history and, in proportion to her population, is as wet as any State in the Union."

The speaker was Dugal P. Dewar, securities broker, sportsman, war veteran, world-wide adventurer and now a candidate for the Republican nomination for United States senator on a wet ticket in the mother of prohibition States.

Dewar waved his arm in a significant gesture toward the villages that lay comfortably tucked away to the north and west of Portland and continued:

"Within 50 miles, there are a thousand places in which home brew is being made regularly.

RUINOUS TO YOUNG

"Maine has her share of night life and it is being steadily degenerated by the illicit use of poisonous liquors.

"The condition is ruinous to the young, especially to the young girls. They drink because it is a prank, the smart and popular thing to do. They ruin their health, depreciate their morals and, in the later years when they should be contributing to the welfare of our wonderful country they will be living in regret over the temptations which befell them under the impulse of prohibition.

"Young women of fine parents have said to me, 'Mr. Dewar, you are the first one who has spoken out against this thing and you are right.' Prominent citizens say to me, 'Dewar, we're for you,' and then slink away lest they be seen in my company by the politicians who rule the state."

HYPOCRISY AND SHAM

Dewar says the recent Republican State convention at Bangor had more surplus liquor than the farmer has surplus wheat. "Their dry plank, the next morning," he said, 'was the result of big heads, sick stomachs and the resultant quick return to professed moral rigidity, ousness. People get that way the morning after.

If elected, he would vote to repeal the national amendment, he said, and would adopt either the Swedish or Canadian system of liquor control. This is his first campaign.

Hits Dry Law

Dugal P. Dewar, candidate for the Republican nomination for Senator in Maine on a wet ticket.

LETTERS FROM AMERICAN READERS

Bill Reported Not An Old Age Pension Bill

Editor Boston American:

"Old Age Pension Bill reported out of committee" was the news carried by various papers some time ago. And great was the rejoicing of those who advocate this honorable and dignified method of relieving the plight of our fellow citizens overtaken by destitution in helpless old age. May I have the courtesy of your column to correct the impression which has gone abroad, and point out that no old age pension bill has been reported.

The bill reported, H. 1168, is not a pension bill. It never uses the word "pension," and it provides merely for "old age assistance," vaguely specified as "adequate." Departments of Public Welfare, through subdivisions on "old age assistance," are to grant this money. General supervision is vested in the State Department of Public Welfare, but it is given no authority to compel local boards to comply with the law if, considering that two-thirds of the sum granted comes out of the local treasury, they do not grant adequate assistance. Nor is any machinery of supervision separated from its general relief functions set up in the State Department of Public Welfare. From the foregoing it is obvious that while the present bill undoubtedly will produce improved relief for the aged poor, it is not, and does not even call itself, a pension bill.

Lauds Campaign for Lower Fares to Revere

Editor Boston American:

Heartiest congratulations to you and Mayor Whalen for trying to help thousands of kiddies and their parents spend the hot days at the seashore by reducing the fare to Revere to five cents.

I am a resident of Crescent Beach, Revere, for the past 16 years and have never missed a chance to go swimming, weather being permissible. I can fully understand and sympathize with those who find it difficult or are totally deprived of this pleasant sport because of the present high fare.

I wish you could see the youngsters as they go morning and noon in the trolley, their finished, eager faces full of joy as they see the cool, green ocean. What will this reduced fare mean to them. More opportunities to come to the beach during the season.

Then how about the countless thousands who have not been able to raise the required sum of 20 cents for a round trip to the beach. They, too, yearn for a dip into the cool surf.

Reduce the rate and they, too, can enjoy a refreshing swim and spend the whole day in a health-giving way.

Urges Watch On Old Age Pension Bill

Editor Boston American:

The Legislatures of New York and Massachusetts have similar old age pension bills pending. Both are extensions of the poor laws and require public support of all persons over 70 whose property and income are inadequate.

These bills are non-contributory, a free handout by the taxpayers, and thus differ from the old age pensions of the continent of Europe, except Norway.

These bills are more extravagant than any old age pension act of the world. They will be three or four times more burdensome on taxpayers than the 10 shillings a week of the British.

In the New York bill no one can estimate the cost of medical and surgical care and nursing in addition to board in the pensioner's own home or other suitable family home. Nor can anyone foresee the cost of suitable and dignified care required by the Massachusetts bill.

Already millions of dollars are expended by local and state welfare departments. In Massachusetts this amount is $11,000,000 annually.

Says Parents Should Stand By Erring Children

Editor Boston American:

"Should parents stand by erring children?"

I say yes! I don't see how they can stand aside when a child is drowning. A child is a part of your body and soul and no one wants to part with a limb even if it is ulcerated. A person will suffer pain of any description to save a part of his body.

It is natural for a father to stand the agony of his son's misfortune regardless of what station of life or position he holds. I would say a teacher of Christianity should follow Christ's example.

Encourages Women In Study of Law

Editor Boston American:

Now that your paper through editorials has registered objections against the World Court and League of Nations and for which some of us women are deeply grateful, would it not be in your line to encourage women who are studying law to make more of international law.

There is little opportunity for women to rise in any branch of the law and especially international law. Even those who were qualified were not invited to take part at the Hague for the First Conference of the Codification of International Law. If women are to show their hand more against the World Court and League of Nations, they must enter into the study of international law—and above all make it evident at conferences.

Cites Caution as Cause of Unemployment

Editor Boston American:

There are different reasons for unemployment. One was mentioned in your letter column, referring to improved machinery. This however is not the main cause of this great problem.

There has been injected into business relations, too much caution. Just as soon as the stock market crash came, business corporations began to apply the brakes of caution. They thought they were going down hill. They knew they were well protected, but they had their hands on the caution brake.

Caution is well enough at times. Business men today are making too much of it. They have put the breaks on plans of extension, they have curtailed their prospects and are becoming victims of fear.

Away with caution, life must always be a great venture with risks on every side. Keep a clear sighted eye, a many sided sympathy, a fine, daring and endless patience.

These are essential to good business for with such qualities alone the sturdy business man is teaching and reaching success. Nothing ventured, nothing done.

Says Society Folk Fail to Contribute

Editor Boston American:

It has been discovered by Vice-President C. F. Weed, of the First National Bank, that 50 per cent of the people named in the Blue Book, belonging to the society circle, and well-to-do people of Greater Boston, were not giving a dollar a year to the 333 social welfare agencies of Boston.

This is called "appalling information." Mrs Lucia Ames Mead, in commenting upon this situation in Boston, says:

"It seems incredible that any privileged person, with every comfort, can be so shamefully deaf and blind to the needs of the poor, the sick, the aged, the unemployed, the foreign, the ignorant and the embryo criminal in this great city of Boston."

It is a pity, it's true, that people living in luxury in that city cannot spare something out of their resources to help and advance the interests of these social welfare organizations that have the interests of the unfortunate in mind and must feed and clothe them.

Blames Autos for Evils of World Today

Editor Boston American:

What really is the cause of so much crime and sin in the world of today? It is the automobile.

In years gone by we rarely heard of a holdup, a bank robbery that are now being committed. Why? Because they could not get away with it.

Although the auto is a wonderful luxury, it is over-balanced by its temptations. There is always a certain class of people who will steal if they thought they would not be caught.

As far as prohibition is concerned, the country is more temperate now than 25 years ago. I can remember when a young girl coming home from the city on a late Saturday night train rode with a herd of drunks that got on the train not only in the smoker, but in the passenger coaches with women and children. It was far worse then than it is now.

If prohibition could be rightly enforced, it would be a wonderful world for us mothers to live in, but sorry to say, I don't believe we'll ever get honest men to enforce the law.

Urges Abolishing Headquarters Squad

Editor Boston American:

The police commissioner of Boston should be appointed by the mayor of Boston. A disinterested board of inquiry should investigate all charges of complaints against the police. The police should not be permitted to investigate themselves.

The headquarters squad should be abolished. Captains of the police should have full charge of that work.

Is YOUR Skin Dry, Oily or Normal?

If your skin is oily—try Plough's "Incense of Flowers" Face Powder in the oval box. Heavy in texture, this face powder will not cake or streak as ordinary powders do. Specially blended for your type of skin, it applies evenly, clings smoothly for hours and lends new beauty to your complexion.

If your skin is normal—Plough's "Exquisite" Face Powder in the round box will delight you with its medium and perfectly balanced texture. Marvelously soft and smooth, this face powder adheres without constant repowdering, keeps the skin fresh and smooth and enhances natural complexion beauty. Each size is available in five modern tints, sensibly priced at 30c, 50c and 75c.

If your skin is dry—here is a face powder that soothes instead of irritating, that applies smoothly instead of "streaking"—Plough's "Favorite Bouquet" Face Powder in the square box. Extremely light in texture, it adheres lastingly, keeps the skin soft and fine-textured and enhances the beauty of your complexion.

ABBIE SPEARE IN ENGAGED GROUP

Junior League Girl Is to Wed Natt Bushnell Jones, Jr., of Newton Center

MISS ABBIE LOUISE SPEARE, Junior League girl and debutante of 1926-27, has joined the ranks of engaged girls. Her mother, Mrs. Arthur P. Speare of Brookline, recently announced Miss Abbie's betrothal to Mr. Natt Bushnell Jones, Jr., of Newton Center. Miss Speare is now a student at Vassar College.

ON FRIDAY EVENING before the launching of the new sloop Vagrant, flagship of the Boston chapter of the Cruising Club of America, Commodore and Mrs. William H. Coolidge, Jr., gave a dinner to celebrate the important event. Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Prince, Mr. and Mrs. Joe Guild, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Sedgwick, Dr. and Mrs. Peer Johnson, Mrs. William Coolidge, Sr., Mrs. Evans Tyler and Mr. and Mrs. George Deane were among the guests. Manchester will be the sailing port of the Vagrant.

A JOLLY PARTY STARTED off for the Maryland Hunt Club Friday as guests of Mr. and Mrs. Sumner Pingree of Hamilton in their private car. The Frederick Ayers, Neil Bliss and Alvin Sortwells were among the group who traveled south for the first important horse event of the season.

North Shore Matrons to Redecorate Club

FIVE ATTRACTIVE AND clever North Shore matrons have conceived their talents and gone in for interior decorating. They are the Mesdames Seabury Hunneman, Ward McNeil and Hal Ellison. We hear that their first important assignment is the redecorating of the Myopia Club at Hamilton.

MRS. WILLIAM COOLIDGE, SR., is leaving for New York with her daughter, Mrs. Stevens, to visit another daughter, who was Kay Coolidge, in Philadelphia. They plan to stay in New York a few days en route.

MRS. GRAHAM FAIR VANDERBILT, mother of Mrs. Muriel Vanderbilt Church of this city, has been in White Sulphur Springs, Virginia, where she is registered at the Greenbrier. She gave a luncheon at the Casino last week.

MISS ETHEL BARRYMORE, who arrived in Boston for the opening of her new play, "The Love Duel," and who will open the exhibition and sale of art at the Copley Plaza on Monday by pouring tea, which looks like promises to be one of the most important artistic and social occasions of the season. It is sponsored by a large group of prominent women and the proceeds will greatly enlarge the funds for the Museum School.

Mrs. G. S. Patton, Jr. Will Be Hostess

MRS. GEORGE S. PATTON, JR., Director Aide, will be one of the hostesses at the National Capital Horse Show, which is to take place from May 13, 14 and 15 at the Horse Show Association Grounds in Bradley Hills, Md. This is one of the annual opening events which Washington society always anticipates with enjoyment. Mrs. Patton and her husband, Maj. Patton, are genuine horse lovers and maintain large stables at their summer home at Green Meadows, South Hamilton.

MR. AND MRS. RUSSELL BURRAGE have opened their Highcrest, their home in North Beverly, after a Mediterranean trip, which lasted several months. They spent considerable time in Egypt, later going to Italy and Belgium and then to England. They will be in Beverly for the remainder of the season.

Melvin M. Johnson's Return From West

MR. AND MRS. MELVIN M. JOHNSON of Boston and Brookline, have returned from a six-weeks' trip to California, Arizona and Texas. They timed their return for the Harvard-Tech race because of the fact that their son, Melvin, is coxswain of the Harvard varsity crew.

MRS. ELIOT WADSWORTH of Marlborough is at the Waldorf in New York.

MR. HOWARD WHITNEY OF New York was a guest at the Ritz-Carlton last week.

MR. AND MRS. LYON WEYBURN and family have opened their home, "Rookies," at Prides Crossing, for a long season, as usual. Mrs. Weyburn will go on to New York this week to attend the Junior League activities as Boston representative.

MISS FRANCES P. MEADE, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Paulding Meade of Beacon st., has set May 20 as the date of her wedding to Mr. Theodore Haviland, 2d, of Limoges, France. The event will take place in the Leslie Lindsay Memorial Chapel of Emmanuel Church, and Miss Meade will have her sister, Miss Elizabeth Meade, as her only attendant. Her engagement to Mr. Haviland was announced in September.

MR. AND MRS. GEORGE UPTON of Channing st., Cambridge, announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Marianne Upton, of Junior League prominence, to Mr. Lucius Manning. They have returned from a several weeks' stay at their place in Virginia. Miss Marianne returned with them.

Miss Betty Burrell, daughter of Mrs. Augustus F. Goodwin, of Hamilton, travels about with such rapidity between Aiken, New York, Boston and Hamilton, we sometimes think she must use a flying carpet and arrived at her destination by wishing. This picture of Miss Burrell and Mr. William King was snapped on Fifth ave., New York. (Press Newspaper Service Photo.)

Show Yesterday Fads at Barnstable Club

Shawls, fans and jewelry which many years comprised an important part of milady's wardrobe will be displayed tonight at the Barnstable Woman's Club meeting for annual election.

A musical program will be presented by the music committee, Mrs. T. W. Swift, chairman. A choral has been formed in the club and ladies in ensemble will appear in old-fashioned costumes, singing a number of tuneful selections. Mrs. F. F. Coville is hostess.

Unity Club to Hear Tercentenary Plans

Latest Tercentenary plans and arrangements will be explained to members of the Ladies' Unity Club when the club holds its annual spring luncheon Wednesday at Hotel Westminster. Miss Sybil H. Holmes of the state board, Tercentenary celebration, will make the principal address.

Mrs. Arthur H. Huribut, president of the club, will welcome to the luncheon-meeting representatives of the State Federation; Mrs. Thomas F. Sisk, ninth district director; Mrs. Carl L. Watson, past president of the Boston City Federation, and Mrs. Judith Hill, past president of the club. Miss Etta Hopkins, matron of the Home for Aged People, which the club supports and maintains; Dr. and Mrs. Eugene C. Thayer and Rev. Sydney Lovett.

A Satin Frock Is Indispensable

From Paris Bureau, Boston Evening American

From Paquin Sketched in Paris

Flare, Fur Sketched in Paris

PARIS, April 28—Satin refuses to be disdained. Season after season, as other fabrics make their triumphant entry proudly displaying their charms, it always seems that the claims of the old standbys will have to be ignored in order to give all the other new and delightful adventures in the material world their due and just chance. Tweeds in a bewildering variety, fine woolen crepes, woolen poplins, fascinating jerseys and tricots — they all have their hour and their place in the sun, and, after carefully choosing a dress of some new and wonderful fabric, along comes a woman looking a picture of perfection in a black satin frock. No experimenting necessary there, just a well cut frock of black satin with little or no trimming and carefully selected accessories—and behold—a true elegante. And so is it any wonder then, that almost every well-dressed woman considers a black satin frock an indispensable part of a well planned wardrobe, whatever fashions may obtain?

PAQUIN has included some charming black satin frocks in the current collection of that house. The sketch on this page is of a frock of satin in a heavy and lustrous quality. The one-sided bertha is in a piece with the other side of the bodice and is shirred at the neckline along one edge. Shallow circular flounces, attached in a diagonal line, trim the straight sleeves. A slightly circular flounce, mounting high on each side of the skirt, gives a moderate flare to the silhouette. The narrow sash, of this simple but distinguished frock, is tied in a bow at the left side.

THE SAME HOUSE is responsible for the very good looking coat of which a sketch is appended. It is of fawn-colored broadcloth trimmed with squirrel dyed to match. The straight lines of the coat are broken by set-on godets, two at the back and one on each sleeve above the elbow. These have a marked circular flare and are bordered with the fur.

BARITONE IN HUB TRIUMPH

By MOSES SMITH

Unknown save in limited musical circles, Bruno Pandiscio displayed the finest baritone voice we have experienced in the concert hall or opera, when he sang at a concert in the Hotel Statler yesterday.

Mr. Pandiscio, who is a veteran of the Royal San Carlo Opera House of Naples, has sung here-hitherto, their home in North Beverly, after a Mediterranean trip, which lasted several months. They spent considerable time in Egypt, later going to Italy and Belgium and then to England. They will be in Beverly for the remainder of the season.

Melvin M. Johnson's Return From West

MR. AND MRS. MELVIN M. JOHNSON of Boston and Brookline, have returned from a six-weeks' trip to California, Arizona and Texas. They timed their return for the Harvard-Tech race because of the fact that their son, Melvin, is coxswain of the Harvard varsity crew.

QUARTET OF WORLD CHAMPION ATHLETICS WHO PLAYED SOX

MR. BOSTON
—by— JACK CONWAY

Jack Conway

THE YOUTHFUL Joe Cashman, baseball writer, was banging away at a typewriter when Mr. Boston dropped into the office late Sunday night.

"Earl Webb did it!" said Joe with much enthusiasm.

"Did what?" demanded Mr. Boston.

"Busted out a home run for the Red Sox," went on Joe. "He also got a single in the game against the Yanks. His hitting won the ball game."

"The boy always could sock the old ball again," chirped Mr. Boston. "Didn't he get a flock of home runs out in Los Angeles last year."

"Forty," said Joe, who knows his baseball dope. "When he came up to thosig leagues for the first time with the Cubs he knocked the ads off the outfield fences with his smashing drives."

"The kid should help the Sox," declared Mr. Boston. "The Quinns have needed an outfielder who can get extra base hits. The Boys who get the singles and the doubles are okay, but the home run cloutter is the one who disorganizes the opposition.

"Much of the success of the Yankees has been due to the long distance hitting of Ruth and Gehrig. They keep the opposing club up in the air and give all pitchers heart disease."

"There was a funny out out at Braves Field," asserted Joe. "Burleigh Grimes stole third with the bases loaded. But as a pitched a swell ball game and the Braves won, a little thing like pilfering third with the bases filled didn't matter."

Cape Cod Calls to Lovers of Sport

Mr. Boston's face presented a healthy glow, while his eyes flashed.

"Why all the good cheer?" asked Joe.

"Spent the day on Cape Cod," answered the veteran. "I understand there were 20,000 persons at the ball game, but there must have been a million or so chugging along the Cape on that kind of car.

"I motored past the Cohasset Golf Club where Yank McNamara holds forth. The links were well crowded. Unlike the days when existed at the Scituate Golf Club, with Jack Leary on the job, and at the Brookfield Golf Club where Alex Bird is the pro.

"At Dunstable and spots further down the Cape the golf courses were also well filled.

"The Cape was well named when called the summer playground of New England. Boating, fishing, golf, bathing and every other kind of outdoor sport is offered.

"The best way to keep healthy is to keep in the great outdoors. Do some exercising yourself, especially if you have a job which keeps you indoors for many hours, and you will add years to your life and health is the most important thing in anybody's life."

Andy Callahan to Try for K. O. Tomorrow Night

JOHNNY BUCKLEY, who aspires to pilot Andy Callahan to the world's lightweight championship, called Mr. Boston on the telephone.

"I look for Andy Callahan to knock out Johnny Farr when they clash in a ten-round bout at the Arena tomorrow night," declared Johnny. "Andy billed Henry Janeo at Lawrence last week and is eager to add another Lynn to his string.

"I look for a great fight when Callahan and Farr collide. Farr, like Callahan, is an aggressive, two-handed warrior and keeps going forward every second he is in the ring. As Callahan has a similar style, there should be some wild exchanging of blows once the gong sounds for the opening of the first round.

"Callahan's objective is a title shot at Sammy Mandell, and he doesn't intend to allow Farr or anybody else to halt his barging advance.

"Callahan and Farr will occupy the center of the fistic stage for the first part of the week," went on Mr. Boston, "as the Arena Club has called off the show it has billed for tonight with Payne and Allen in the main bout. Payne ran out of the lussle."

B. C. Golfers Play Tech Tomorrow

With victories over Syracuse and Tufts, Boston College's golf team will attempt to register number three win over Tech tomorrow afternoon.

Capt. Frank Murphy and his club-swingers started out where the B. C. team of a year ago left off. The 1929 outfit was not beaten and this year's group is bidding for similar honors.

TUFFY FAVORED OVER GAGNON

New York, April 28 (AP)—Tuffy Griffiths, Sioux City, Ia., heavyweight, this week will try to stage one of the most serious blots on his fistic record.

The middle westerner who, some experts have declared, is destined to be champion of the world, meets Jack Gagnon, Boston heavyweight, in a return bout at the Chicago Stadium Wednesday night.

It was Gagnon who halted Griffiths in six rounds when the Sioux City puncher was bowling over all opposition early this year. Tuffy is out to avenge that unexpected defeat and the betting fraternity probably will make him the favorite before ring time.

Loughran and Schaaf Meet in Philly Tonight

Heavyweights hold the spotlight at Philadelphia tonight. Tommy Loughran, retired light heavyweight champion, meeting Ernie Schaaf of Boston in the top ten rounder. Maxie Rosenbloom, who won from Larry Johnson, Chicago negro light heavyweight, on a foul in their first meeting, will face Johnson again in the feature of Madison Square Garden's reopening card Wednesday night.

Primo Carnera puts on another show at Seattle on Friday, boxing Tom Sayers of Detroit ten rounds or less.

Charge British Soccer Game Fixed

London, April 28 (AP)—Reports that an attempt was made to interfere with the result of a soccer game April 12 between Bradford City and Bury, by an offer of an illegal payment, has led to the appointment of a football association committee to investigate.

Bury players are said to have reported the attempt to a Bury official prior to the game. It is understood the bribe was offered by an old international goalkeeper.

Bradford City, at the time of the Bury game, was one of the second division teams facing demotion to the third division on account of its poor showing. Bradford City beat Bury two goals to one, in the game in question.

Harvard Team After Local Track Title

Back from Philadelphia with new track laurels, Coach Eddie Farrell's Harvard track team started a week's training for the Greater Boston intercollegiates at the Stadium today.

The Crimson track coach was elated with the results shown by his fledglings at the Penn meet, and predicted that lower outdoor marks would be seen next Saturday.

No less than 150 Harvard cinder path artists will be eligible to compete in the Greater Boston intercollegiates, when Harvard will be hosts to Boston College, Boston University, Northeastern, Tufts, and M. I. T. track teams.

This is the largest number of Crimson men ever to compete in the same meet. It far outnumbers the entries in any intercollegiate competition Harvard has ever staged, and is expected to be one of the greatest events in local history.

With varsity and freshman teams battling for the 450 possible points to be amassed, track fans will see some of the greatest running ever witnessed on local paths.

Harvard Is Heavy Favorite to Win

Harvard, of course, will be the heavy favorite to win the meet, both by reason of the quantity and quality of the Crimson flyers.

Due to the fact that unlimited entries are permitted, the coaches of the competing colleges will have the rare opportunity of seeing their entire squads in competition.

Promptly at 3 p. m. Friday, track big meet gets under way. In two hours, the officials hope to run off 29 qualifying events, so that the semi-finals and finals may be run off without too many heats Saturday.

B. C. Track Team in Hub Intercollegiate Meet

Boston College's trackmen began today to prepare for the most important meet in recent years, the Greater Boston intercollegiates, at the Harvard Stadium next Friday and Saturday.

Harvard, B. C., B. U., Tech, Tufts and Northeastern will be battling in the Crimson horseshoe with both their varsity and freshman teams.

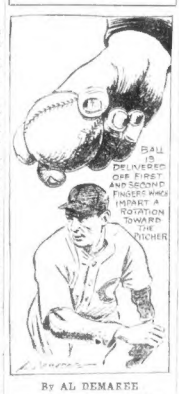
Boston College has got nothing more than a slim chance of winning the meet. But while there is a chance, Jack B[illegible] will take every means to seize it.

The Eagles are an unbalanced track outfit, with practically no point-winning material in the high jump, pole vault and broad jump. Were it not for Zeus Wilczewski, an excellent man with the weights, the Eagles would have no field department to speak of.

Harvard is strong in every event and should walk off with the meet. With six colleges competing, however there may be a broad distribution of points and some of the smaller colleges might have a chance of upsetting the Crimson.

Big League BASEBALL

Guy Bush's Fast Ball



By AL DEMAREE

Former Pitcher of New York Giants

Guy Bush delivers his fast ball with an overhand delivery, the ball shooting down from the highest point of his swing.

Always remember that in developing a fast ball comparable to that of Bush, it should be delivered with the easiest swing possible in order to get all the body and the added "follow through" into it.

Be sure when the ball leaves the tips of the first two fingers that you impart a decided snap to it, that starts the ball rotating backward toward you. If necessary, use a little powdered resin on the fingers to make them sticky. The result of the snap is the ball leaves the fingers in that the ball drops slightly as it approaches the batter, until a few feet from him, where it straightens out, due to the backward and upward spin, and shoots straight to the catcher parallel to the ground, instead of continuing a downward course.

State Soccer Cup Final Date May 18

The State soccer cup committee has decided to play the final game of their competition May 18. Following Lusitania's 5 to 1 triumph over General Electric, it was decided to stage the Lusitania-Morgan Construction windup as the opening game at what will be the new Lusitania stadium on Concord ave., Cambridge. Bill Butler, Portuguese manager, stated the field could be ready for play that date.

The qualifying cup final between General Electric and Clan Murray will be played Sunday at Springfield.

Callahan to Try for K. O. Over Farr

With the hope of registering a decisive knockout victory, Andy Callahan, Lawrence ring star, will open fire with both hands in his bout with Johnny Farr, Cleveland Italian at the Boston Arena tomorrow night.

Always a terrific puncher Callahan expects to stop Farr in spite of the fact that the latter succeeded in defeating Horatio Esposito following numerous jaunts with Jimmy Miller and Andy Martin.

Yet in spite of Callahan's wonderful record for the bout, Farr also has his own views of his chances and he intimates that he is prepared to swap wallops with Callahan from the opening gong to the finish. Farr has lost only nine out of fifty-seven battles without ever taking the count and he has little fear of Callahan's southpaw style.

TUFTS NINE TO PLAY BOWDOIN

Having added Bates to its list of victims, the undefeated Tufts nine faces two tests week, on the schedule meeting Bowdoin at the Oval next Saturday in the only game listed for this week.

Tufts continued its hard hitting against Bates and raised its team average to a high mark of .260 in the game to date. Ockert and Maher are tied for high honors in the individual batting honors, while Atkinson and McCarthy, by heavy hitting on Saturday, raised their marks to within a few points of the leaders.

Chattanooga Buys Outfielder Bratcher

Chattanooga, Tenn., April 28 (AP)—Purchase of J. W. Bratcher, outfielder from the Boston Braves by the Chattanooga Lookouts, was announced today.

He will join the Lookouts in Memphis Thursday. Bratcher was drafted from the Denver club by the Braves at the end of last season.

16 Games on Wesleyan Schedule

Middletown, Ct., April 28 (AP)—Wesleyan University's basketball schedule of 16 games for the 1930-1931 season was announced today. It follows:

Dec. 17, Yale at New Haven; 19, Haverford at Haverford; 20, Columbia at New York; Jan. 10, Amherst; 16, Tufts at Medford; 17, Brown at Providence; 21, Mass. Aggies at Amherst; 24, Conn. Aggies; 31, Rensselaer Poly; Feb. 4, Boston University; 11, Worcester Poly; 14, Williams at Williamstown; 18, Trinity at Hartford; 21, Amherst at Amherst; 28, Springfield; 28, Williams.

TUFTS NINE TO 5 CREW RACES PLAY BOWDOIN ON SATURDAY

New York, April 28 (AP)—Five of the East's nine college crews will take to the water next Saturday in search of victory in one of the two major regattas.

On the Housatonic at Derby, Ct., Columbia intercollegiate champions will defend the Blackwell cup against the challenge of Yale and Pennsylvania. On Lake Carnegie at Princeton Chuck Logan's Tigers will make their first start of the season against the Engineers of Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

The Blackwell cup regatta was the Columbia varsity's first race of the year since 1928. The Lions were last pressed to nose out the Navy at Annapolis and Ed Leader's varsity eight may be even more of a task for Columbia.

Rusty Callow's Penn boat is by no means or less of an unknown quantity, but there appears to be little likelihood that the Philadelphians can beat either Columbia or Yale.

The varsity race will be at two miles and will be the junior varsity and freshmen events. The race for 150-pound crews will be rowed over a course of one mile and five sixteenths.

Although Princeton has yet to appear in competition this year, the Tigers will be favored over M. I. T. which already has taken the backwash of Columbia and Navy on the Severn, and of Harvard on the Charles at Cambridge.

The Engineers showed considerable improvement against Harvard on Saturday, losing by a length but they will be under-dogs against Princeton. Junior varsity, 150-pound crews and freshmen events also will be on the regatta program.

RESULTS TODAY

Northern 5, Midland 4.
Southern 7, The Country Club 2.
Central 7, Brae Burn 2.

By BILL GRIMES

After winning four matches, the Midland District suffered its first defeat of the U. G. A. season when they lost to Northern 5 to 4 today at the Winchester Country Club. By its victory over Mirland, Northern went into a tie for first place.

Southern and Central Districts are deadlocked for third place by virtue of their victories over The Country Club and Brae Burn respectively.

Southern defeated The Country Club 7 to 2 at Thorney Lea, while Central ran up the same score on Brae Burn, which was incidental to the West Newton affair.

The Midland-Northern match at Winchester was close and hard-fought. The outlooper was the only Midland Miss Fred W. Fore, Jr., playing at No. 9, came through with a 2 up victory over Mrs. P. Bartlett Gore Northern player.

There were two outstanding matches, both of which were won by Midland. Mrs. H. F. Bonnaret, Jr., defeated Miss Margaret Curtis 1 up and Mrs. H. K. Leonard proved a surprise over Miss Grace English, defeating her 4 and 3 after trailing the latter by seven holes to square the match.

The best individual record was turned in by Miss Grace English who is now sharing honors with Mrs. H. H. Hicks, 12 and 11, and Miss Margaret Curtis, 3 and 1, as the only five-time winners representing first teams. Miss English went out in the second game home in 46 for a remarkable 87.

Miss Marie Bonnaret of Midland and Mrs. R. W. Hyde of Northern suffered their first defeats of the season at Winchester. Miss M. Bonnaret, defeating the former 3 and 1 and Miss M. M. Kennedy winning over the latter by the same score.

De Forest and Loughran Pick Sharkey to Beat Maxie

SCHMELING IS A 'ONE HAND' FIGHTER

By DAVIS J. WALSH

New York, April 28—They may fling garlands of sauerkraut in the Herr Schmeling's honor when he arrives here this week to accept, in that typically broad minded way of his, the quarter part of a million dollars and a chance at the heavyweight championship on June 12; but it seems to be only fair to relate that the writer caught up with a couple of eminent authorities today who appeared to be on their way to the florist bearing tributes of raspberries.

The first of these was Jimmy de Forest, who trained Dempsey for the greatest fight he ever made and later did things for and with Firpo that carried an interim champ fighter to a point where he was only one punch short of the championship.

De Forest says the Herr Schmeling ought to be 2 to 1 to lose when the Teuton and Sharkey go in there for the title in June.

Loughran Speaks With Authority on Subject

So does Tommy Loughran, former champion in the class below Thomas as a very eminent authority on this point.

He qualifies for the role because he was the recipient some months ago of a clout upon the countenance by the aforesaid Sharkey which promptly discontinued and analyzed him for the remainder of a long evening. This circumstance gives Thomas a considerable advantage over Schmeling in viewing the merits of the situation.

He already has been hit by Sharkey, Schmeling hasn't. But he will be, according to Thomas.

The idea of this pair, by the way, are as far from conclusive that they don't even balance in Schmeling sentiment that crystallized here early and now, some six weeks in advance of the fight, is just as boisterously insistent as ever.

He'll Never Hit Sharkey With Right, Says de Forest

"They don't say how the Herr Schmeling can go wrong, which brings up the inevitable difference of opinion so necessary to the success of an enterprise. It is the essential something that distinguishes a mere prize fight from a million-dollar extravaganza.

However, I have overtaken no Schmeling exponent who is as smart a man on the end of an opinion as is dames De Forest. He lattes decent points of contracting styles and all the other eyewash with which the boys are prone to amuse themselves.

"He'll never hit Sharkey with that right hand," said he, simply. "He's a one-hand fighter and it's the wrong hand. His left means nothing. How is he going to win?"

And how indeed, echoes Thomas Loughran, who arrives at the same conclusion with the use of different reasoning.

LOOKING RIGHT THROUGH THE BOOK :-: :-: By McGURK

Diamond Pick-Ups

By JOE CASHMAN

President John A. Heydler of the National League was a spectator at the Sabbath contest between the Braves and the Phils. He came to see how the game is thriving in the Hub. The 20,000 crowd proved to him that it is just as popular here as ever, even though there hasn't been a winning team in town for a dozen years.

The "proxy" opined, among other things, that a good catcher would make the Braves one of the most dangerous clubs in the league, that Freddie Maguire is the greatest fielding second baseman in captivity, and that the present season would prove the most prosperous in National League history.

He didn't say anything about his umpires, but if he didn't say a few things to the trio that officiated at the game after it was over, he should have.

Charlie Moran, acting as the chief arbiter, was wrong continually. He chase. Manager Bill McKechnie for making a legitimate protest. Third Baseman Billy Rhiel had to almost climb up the back of Cy Williams, Phil coacher, while going after a fly ball, which he missed, in the second inning, but Moran refused to take any action and gave the Trifal pilot the gate because he claimed interference, which was plainly evident.

In the sixth, he made a few new rules of his own. With Maranville on third and Richbourg on first, the Philly twirler made a wild pitch.

The Rabbit scored and when the ball hit him as the Phils were trying to get him at the plate, Richbourg, who reached second, advanced to third safely. The Phils protested and Moran arbitrated, allowing the run but sending Richbourg back to second.

He couldn't have been right. If Maranville had been guilty of interference, he should have been called out. If he hadn't broken any rule, Richbourg was entitled to third base.

That there is more baseball interest in the Hub than for several years was plainly indicated after the game when thousands of fans swarmed around home plate and requested of the scribes up in the coop the final score of the Red Sox game in New York. It didn't arrive until nearly fifteen minutes after the close of the local contest, but most of the customers waited to hear the result.

Billy Rogell, former Red Sox infielder, didn't last very long as the regular shortstop of the Detroit Tigers. He was replaced by Bill Akers on the Sabbath and since the Tigers, who had been in a rut, slump, won easily. Bill's chances of getting back in the lineup in a hurry aren't very bright.

BUSY WEEK FOR COLLEGE NINES

New York, April 28 (AP)—Teams in the Eastern Intercollegiate Baseball League today open their busiest and most important week of the season with Princeton scheduled against Dartmouth at Princeton. With Gomar Hollstrom available for pitching duty, Dartmouth is favored, but Princeton will have the incentive of a clear claim to the lead to urge itself on.

Jeff Tesreau's 9nm fought its way back into the thick of the pennant fight and at the same time crammed Columbia hopes considerably by defeating the Light Blue and White, 10 to 2, in New York yesterday.

The rest of the week's schedule in the league will give Pennsylvania and Cornell a chance to advance their standing. Penn will entertain Columbia at Franklin Field on Wednesday and Yale on Saturday. Cornell will play Columbia in New York on Friday and Princeton in Princeton on Saturday.

As a result of its 8 to 3 victory over Pennsylvania in New Haven last Saturday, Yale is leading the league with a record of two games won and no lost. Pennsylvania, Dartmouth and Cornell each has won and lost one game. Columbia has won no and lost two. Princeton began its season today against Dartmouth.

Loss of Hornsby and Bell Blow to Cubs

Chicago, April 28 (AP)—The first two weeks hardly can be taken seriously in a major league baseball campaign, but this year they have definitely established the fact that Joe McCarthy's Cubs will have to recover quickly and do some great hustling if they are to repeat their National League championship.

Injuries have jinxed the team from the start and the end is still far from sight. Rogers Hornsby still is lame from the spur growth on his right heel and his batting punch may be missing from the team for a month, and possibly for the rest of the season, despite the cheerful reports of examining physicians.

Lester Bell Suffering From Lame Arm

Lester Bell, a big Cub investment in the attempt to plug up the weak third base spot, still is suffering from a lame arm and he, too, may not get in any more games than does the "rajah." Added to that the pitching staff is far from ready and the big stock of promising rookies, obtained over winter to bolster the pitching staff, is not so promising after all.

Added to all these "hearish" developments has been the break in the weather. Of all the teams in the National League, the Cubs need stalling time. Yet they are the only ones in the circuit to be denied it.

They have played every day since the season opened and today rest on the red side of the ledger with six won and seven lost.

Even Manager McCarthy is dubious about Hornsby's quick return to the lineup. In the few times the "rajah" has been used as a pinch hitter, his limp has been very noticeable.

With his usual optimism he advises he will be back "very soon" and that he is almost ready, but day after day he remains on the bench with the Cubs starving for that extra punch he wielded last season when a run or two meant the difference between defeat and victory.

May Have to Operate on Hornsby Again

Another operation on the heel would not surprise any one familiar with his ailment. And another operation would mean his definite absence for two months and probably McCarthy's fond hopes of another championship.

Peculiarly enough, the world series skirmish with the Athletics seems to have left its imprints on the team. All last season, the Cubs were deadly against southpaw pitchers, "Lefty" Grove of the Athletics stopped that habit and now the Cubs do not appear able to win from left-handers.

But Manager McCarthy and his team are fighting and take the start philosophically.

"It looks like we are getting all the bad breaks now," said Marse Joe, "But a bad start usually means a great finish. Anyway, seven defeats in 13 starts against teams like St. Louis, Cincinnati and Pittsburgh isn't so bad for our condition. My pitchers aren't quite ready yet, but shouldn't worry too much. We lost several games by bad breaks, too."

Proud Record

In 27 National League campaigns, the Giants, directed by John McGraw, have finished below the first division on but two occasions. They were fifth once and last once.

BRITISH HAVE NEW TENNIS STAR

London, April 28—British lawn tennis experts today were firm in the belief that a second Suzanne Lenglen has been unearthed in Miss Doris Round, 20-year-old net star, who has beaten Miss Joan Fry, Miss Joan Ridley and Mrs. Holcroft-Watson—ranked No. 1 among British women—in the Wightman cup trial matches.

The youthful British miss lives at Dudley, Worcestershire, and she was taught tennis by her three brothers.

Five years ago, she began to take the game seriously, coached by her eldest brother, considered one of the cleverest tennis tacticians in Britain.

Within a year she won the junior championship of the Midlands. Last year, she was beaten by Betty Nuthall, at Wimbledon, after a terrific match, but she won the senior Midlands championship, beating Joan Fry 6—1, 6—4.

Tall, slim and strongly built, Doris is tremendously fast on the court, and her timing and wrist work are so smoothly finished that her hard drives seem effortless.

She is an all-court expert. Her drives to the corners permit safe volleying excursions, and it was this fact, coupled with her ability to anticipate Mrs Watson's cunningly placed shots that gave her victory.

She is modest and unspoiled and she says: "I am not a star, but I am practising. I think my backhand is weak."

The selection probably will bracket her with Betty Nuthall as first choice for the British Wightman Cup team.

Baseball Leading Sport at Boston College High

HUB SCHOOL HAS THREE TEAMS

By BILL CONNELL

Many high schools and colleges are complaining about the lack of interest in baseball. Some of these institutions are dropping the national game as too expensive for the amount of benefit it gives the student body.

Yet Boston College high, home of many fine school nines in the past, not only has a fast varsity ball team, but also has freshman and sophomore ball teams, playing regular schedules.

Bill Connell

Mr. Joseph Long, S. J., a great schoolboy athlete of B. C. high about ten years ago, coaches the freshman team. This club averages 12 years old, yet plays small high school and junior high teams and more than holds its own.

Mr. James Lyons, S. J., is mentor of the soph nine. Mr. Lyons was a star athlete of B. C. high a decade back. His team plays a schedule much the same as that of the freshman nine, except that the second team faces nines a bit more powerful than those which meet the yearlings.

Class games complete the list of minor baseball activities of the James at school. Above all these teams is the regular high school nine, coached by Art McManus. This group has shown a lot of power in its games to date and shapes up as one of the best of this season's school ball clubs.

The school nine has Buzz Harvan as its first string catcher. He is a splendid school backstop.

Fallon and Blieler Are Star Boxmen

Fallon and Blieler are the pitching standbys of the team. The former, a right hander, fanned 22 men in a 14-inning game at Lawrence a week ago. Blieler did well against Brookline high the other day.

The infield and outfield match up well with other teams. The nine is ready to wind up its season with a record surpassed by none of the schoolboy ball teams.

It is with that it is seen that at least one high school shows none of the lack of interest in baseball of which many secondary schools complain.

And the enthusiasm in the student body fully warrants the expenditure of time and money which is made on baseball at B. C. high. The national game is yet the national game, as far as the Maroon and Gold students are concerned.

Fall River, April 28—Fall River defeated Brooklyn, 1 to 0, in an Atlantic coast soccer league match here yesterday afternoon before 2000 fans. A high wind spoiled play. Fall River's lone goal, a marker by White, came after 20 minutes of play in the first half.

GOOD GOLF

By CHESTER HORTON
"Golf's Greatest Teacher"

The position of your weight, and its correct use in the drive, will become an increasingly interesting phase of play as you learn the effective ways to make use of your weight in driving. Golf theorists look at posed pictures of golfers and unable themselves to make good drives and therefore not thoroughly understanding the principles of it always maintain that at the instant of contact you are in your exact address position. The theorist who repeats that golfing error is, I might politely say, full of the exuberance of his own verbosity. He indicates only that as an observer of golf, and not a participant in it, his mind is slower than his eyes. Your weight keeps solidly on your right heel all the way forward, and should be there when the clubhead swings into and through the ball. Just at that instant, however, your footwork is very fast, and the left foot and leg arrest your passing weight. This lets the entire weight of your body, plus the springlike action of your right side, go into the ball smoothly together. It should be obvious that that your weight could not go into the ball if it has already gone to your left leg before the clubhead gets to the ball. Keep back with your weight—get the clubhead there first.

Between You and Me

High Foot Is Derby Choice Several Bradley Entries Gallant Fox Hope of East

By DAMON RUNYON

New York, April 28—Mr. Warren Brown, the Chicago editor, assures me that High Foot is a mortal cinch to win the Kentucky Derby, which this year we must one and all speak of at all times as the "Darby," because the Earl of Derby himself, in person, will be present listening in on us.

To tell the truth, I have been privately practicing on the pronunciation ever since I heard that the English nobleman for whose family the Kaintucky darby, and all other darbys, except the brown, were named, will be on hand.

Damon Runyon

I get mixed up sometimes, and find myself calling it the "Dabby," which is strictly Kentuckyese, and then again I fall into the error of the New York pronunciation, which is "dolby." But in the main, I'm darbying it right smartly.

Mr. Brown hasn't asked me not to pass his tip on high foot around so I do not feel obligated to keep it secret. I gather from what he says that all Chicago is in it, anyway, which strikes me as treason, or at least infidelity, to the Chicago-owned steed, Dedicate, which is my favorite for the big heat.

It isn't even teetered by the fact that Dedicate got a fine royal American plastering down in the blue grass Saturday from the good Kunnel Edward Riley Bradley's darby candidate, Buckeye Poet, and J. M. Camden's Sydney. Darby horses were getting licked all over the country Saturday.

Bradley Entries Must Be Considered

AS A MATTER of fact, I am glad to see to see Kunnel Bradley suddenly step forward with a likely Darby prospect. The Bradleys are the pride of the Kaintucky hard boots, and when the kunnel hasn't at least a Chinaman's chance in the Darby, a lot of heat is removed.

The chart informs me that Buckeye Poet, which is by good old Black Toney, raced as if much the best, and won going away. The race was at a mile.

Breezing thru, another Bradley, was fifth, behind Sydney Dedicate, and Ray Blades, and began dropping back after going five furlongs.

Dedicate, which won a race at the Lexington course a few days previous, followed the pace closely, but couldn't improve his position. Another Darby candidate, Tannery, beat a fair field with ease over the Futurity course at Lexington on Saturday.

Over in Maryland the same day, a flock of Darby and Preakness possibilities, including such as Michigan Boy, Swinfield, Full Dress, Skirl, Ned O., Wooderaft and Crazy Coot, tottered home behind the Seagram stable's Sweet Sentiment in the Chesapeake stakes.

Gallant Fox Is Hope of East in Derby

THE EFFETE EAST, which has been somewhat subdued about the Darby since it became a certainty that the Whitney marvels, Whichone and Boojum aren't to go, has chucked out its chest again over the performance of a steed called Gallant Fox in the Wood Memorial Stakes at Jamaica Saturday.

This Gallant Fox belongs to the Belair stud, owned by Mrs. Henry C. Phipps and Ogden L. Mills. He is eligible for the Darby, as well as the Preakness and the Belmont, and after seeing him bounce around a mile and 70 yards ahead of Crack Brigade, Desert Light, Gold Brook and Spinach, the Eastern turf folks decided that they've got a Darby winner sure pop.

Earle Sands straddled Gallant Fox, and the nag won by plenty of daylight from Crack Brigade.

Desert Light, which finished third, was one of the red hot favorites in the winter book for the Darby, but after the race Gallant Fox had dropped to 4 to 1.

Spinach, which belongs to William Ziegler, Jr., is another hide that a lot of folks fancied for the Darby, but he ran as if he isn't quite ready.

The domestic help problem is solved by using a kitchenette apartment and the best are advertised daily in the For Rent columns.

French army camps that the Americans were instructed, it was on French railroads that they moved toward the front, it was largely French equipment that was used in furnishing the new army.

NUMBERS ARE HUGE

During the long months during which I collaborated with General Pershing, I was able to judge the enormous difficulties and so I want to take this opportunity to sketch several essential features which I believe can explain away certain incidents brought back to live by the recent literary polemics.

First, we must have the figures before us. The American army in April, 1917, numbered 200,000 men, but by July, 1918, it numbered 2,400,000, half of whom were in France. By November it numbered 3,600,000, of whom 2,000,000 were in France.

While these figures are prodigious, they do not represent all, for the numbers recruited drafted and transported, while very important, are not everything. It is not sufficient to assemble hundreds of thousands of improvised soldiers. It is another problem to arm, instruct, command and build a framework among them of trained sergeants and corporals.

Briefly, it was necessary to take 3,000,000 peace-loving young Americans, absolutely new to warfare, and train them within the shortest possible delay for the most murderous and most scientific of all wars. Considering it in relation to its immense task, Yankee permanent military organization was practically non-existent.

PEACE TO WAR

This statement of fact is not criticism. Rather, this situation shows that between the point of departure and the high state of perfection which the A. E. F. finally achieved, how much had to be accomplished.

During the half century preceding 1917, the United States had prospered without the preoccupation of a serious war, since Cuba and the Philippines were only colonial adventures.

Her regular army by its constitution and its conventions had remained as at the Civil War, which ranks high in history as one of the major wars and was filled with military lessons, but was long in the past when the World War broke out.

OFFICERS UNTAUGHT

Her officers were filled with ardor and bravery and a spirit of enterprise, animated generally by the highest military virtues, but mostly still ignorant of the tortures of warfare as developed in the last battles of the World War. Their number was tiny in comparison with the needs of such a great army. On April, 1917, there were 9570 officers, but by November, 1918, they numbered 183,000.

Meanwhile, from 1914 to 1917, the many armies at grips in Europe had received uninterrupted lessons in warfare from the hardest of taskmasters; that is, active combat. Their military doctrines, their offensive and defensive tactics, were adopted day after day at a costly price to the multiple and lightning-like changes in the mediums of destruction which with modern war was filled.

SPEED PRAISED

Instead of such training under actual fire, it was necessary to substitute artificial battle-field instruction for several months for each of the millions of Americans. It was necessary to improvise hundreds of miles in the rear actual trench conditions, so tary hierarchy, from the simple privates through the several months for each of the millions of Americans. It was necessary to improvise hundreds of miles in the rear actual trench conditions, so that through the entire militarygeants and up to the highest officers, everyone could master his difficult and heroic profession.

From that it was necessary for the American army to transform from top to bottom its technique and its tactics taught along the same Civil War lessons since 1863, and even the structure of its military formations.

Here is where I differ with the recent critics. I find it astonishing not that it took so long to do this, but that they did it so quickly.

I want to insist upon this question of structure, for after having opened unending controversies within each army during the action, it continues today to encourage retrospective quarrels.

By 1917 three years of costly experiment and tests had brought the allied military authorities to the conclusion that the real unit of warfare was the division.

AS TO ORGANIZATION

The division is a formation of somewhat more than 20,000 men, constituted in such a fashion so as to be self-sufficient, with a rational division of its forces between infantry, machine gunners, engineers, sanitary troops and quartermaster's corps, possessing its own staff, its own armaments, its own means of defensive action, such as machine guns, field pieces, heavy artillery, trench mortars, airplanes, bombs, grenades and its own transport services briefly, every service which troops in action might need.

It was agreed after experiences that divisions must be identical so as to be interchangeable among themselves, much the same system as that by which artillery and rifles are standardized so that the parts are interchangeable. Thus the commander-in-chief is able to move divisions about as a chess player moves pawns about the strategic board. He might support the action of some division by special artillery or airplanes which could be borrowed from surplus elements not yet formed into divisions, but that was only a surplus lent today and with drawn tomorrow.

From one ally's army to another the divisions, if not identical, were at least so near alike in formation that they could easily be lent or exchanged. Early in the war at Ypres, for example, the French spontaneously put small units of regiments and battalions at the disposition of British divisions. But those were exceptional and ephemeral circumstances.

DREAM FAILS

In the minds of the most fervent apostles of the unique command was envisioned the possibility for the supreme chief to maneuver, without touching their internal organization, all the allied divisions as units in a single great army, just as a chess player can move his pawns, each pawn being a self-contained division. That was a Utopian dream never realized.

Even as late as May, 1918, Marshal Haig disputed the right of Foch, who had by then become generalissimo of the Franco-British armies, to impose such and such a position in the front line upon a British division.

As soon as America entered the war, and viewing the formidable obstacles to creating a great army from millions of pieces of raw material, certain technicians spoke longingly of amalgamation. The amalgamation was simply to be the incorporation of small units of hastily recruited and hastily trained American infantrymen in British and French divisions.

Thus the United States would have appeared as an endless and vast reservoir of men and raw material for the battlefield in which the allied armies could dip to fill the breaches in their own ranks. But this simple project would not withstand sensible examination.

There arose all sorts of objections and impossibilities to oppose such a scheme of filtering the Americans into the allies' armies, which rapidly proved sufficient to set aside such a theory.

The first objection was the moral impossibility of arousing America's enthusiasm by sending her boys to France to fight not under the American, but French or British flags. Had the scheme been tried, the simple fact that it was attempted would have had deplorable consequences. It would not only have checked the splendid spirit of America, but it would have aroused legitimate indignation of the American people.

Only one way stood open for the powerful military intervention of America, and that was to improvise a powerful army; that is, to create, organize and instruct American divisions like similar divisions of European armies. It was upon that project that the Washington authorities and the allied representatives agreed early in April, 1917. Secretary of War Newton Baker and High Commissioner Tardieu worked tirelessly to realize it.

SYSTEM ANTIQUATED

As a matter of fact, the American regular army was divided into divisions, but each division comprised three brigades, each of three regiments of infantry, corresponding to the time when war was slow, fought by foot troops and the rifle was master.

These divisions were topheavy from the number of infantrymen, overbalanced from the lack of auxiliary troops, too weak in proportion in machine guns and artillery, and by the total absence of those new machines of war indispensable in attack as well as in defense. Those American divisions were unusable as they stood in modern warfare.

It was only in early September, 1917, that it was definitely decided to form new divisions. While the British and French divisions were relatively feeble in infantry as a result of the crisis in manpower after three years of bleeding, the Americans, newly transformed in divisions of an average strength of 27,152 men, had a dominating proportion of riflemen and machine gunners, all on foot.

From this developed certain necessary slowness of movement, difficulties of mobility and the correspondent slowness in keeping men in the advanced zone supplied with food and ammunition.

The allies believed that it would be possible to eliminate the difficulties by the use of as much modern war machinery as possible, since in their divisions there was no remedy for the shortage of men.

PERSHING PRAISED

In the organization of the new divisions, the French and the British, while steering as far as possible from American traditions of the composition of divisional units, did frame divisions as much as possible to conform to the divisions of their future brothers in arms.

It is hardly necessary to recall here the magnificent collaboration and co-ordination necessitated to raise in America, to train in France, and to instruct and arm, first 42 and then 90 American divisions. That feat alone would require a volume to tell.

It is possible to summarize General Pershing's accomplishments by saying that under his leadership America accomplished the superhuman achievement of forming her great new army "ready for battle during the battle," and that 3000 miles away from its bases, separated from its depots by an ocean studded with hostile submarines.

It is only natural that during the first months, which seemed too long, there were many who did not know of or refused to realize the enormous task ahead of General Pershing, the distance and difficulties of communication which brought on inevitable displays of ill-temper.

But each occasion only accentuated the action and made the people and government of America more determined to carry out their plans unchanged and to throw into the war their entire force without reserve and without limit.

At this point must some day be written the story of that generous union of France and America. As fast as America gathered her sons and sent them to France, and sent along with them raw products, powder, steel, explosives and foodstuffs, the French arsenals and munition workers fitted out the American millions as fast as they arrived with the famous 75MM and 155MM cannons and tanks, many of which are still used in the French army today.

MANY DISPUTES

However, despite this magnificent effort and fraternal cooperation, it would not be difficult to cite examples of bureaucratic dissension dragged over an unreasonable length of time without cause.

I recall a particularly loud controversy over the furnishing of French lumber needed to build American barracks and warehouses. That was a minor subject over which to quarrel; it should never have been begun and should never have endured, for it was not a time to consider such a matter to the American army, another controversy broke out as to bookkeeping. What insignificant details in such a prodigious effort.

Looking back after more than 10 years, it is clearly apparent how minor were those quarrels, yet they proved bothersome at that time and they upset the harmony and caused much ill feeling, which is still apparent in recent literature.

Yet when the allies were fighting with their backs to the wall.

I was finally able to bring the controversy to a sudden end by putting two vast forces at General Pershing's disposal. Then, when France wanted to sell a part of her army horses

RESULTS LAUDED

What should be retained forever are the results as a whole, such as the improvised naval bases at Brest and Bordeaux, which served such a useful purpose, and instruction camps sown all over France from the Atlantic to the Vosges.

What must be remembered also above all else is the unprecedented decision of General Pershing early in 1918 when he accepted the suggestion to place incompletely prepared American divisions in calm sectors of the front line, thus releasing trained troops for other busier fronts.

We should remember also that General Pershing sent partially trained regiments into French and British Divisions to hasten their instruction since they learned faster by rubbing shoulders in action with troops trained from the beginning of the war. These regiments were all the more valuable when they were sent into the furnace of front line fire.

ELEMENT OF TIME

But in the face of all the willingness to co-operate there was a factor which played an essential role which neither energy nor an indomitable spirit could hold back. That was the element of time.

That was the tragedy of the drama from July, 1917, to July, 1918, between the definite breaking up of the Russian army and the entrance on the scene of the powerful American contingents. Germany gathered all her forces on the western front. It was an anxious question whether Germany would have the time and strength to pound her continental adversaries to pieces before the Americans were ready.

There had been an earlier lesson. Early in 1916, when Kitchener's army was not yet ready, Germany could concentrate and throw her forces against the French army at Verdun. Was an analogous strategy to be renewed against the tired armies of the French and British in the spring of 1918? By July, 1918, Kerensky's supreme effort to strike a spark of life among the straggling Russian forces and bring a little activity on the eastern front again had definitely failed.

HISTORIC MEETING

About that time there occurred a moving and historic meeting of the superior war committee attended by Foch and Petain, and at which Premier Alexandre Ribot put the question:

"Would it be better to attempt by a general offensive movement along the whole western front to break the enemy line while the Russian army is nothing but a badly cracked wall but still a facade, or should we await 1918 despite the risk of a forward rush of all Germany's forces next springtime?"

With impressive precision and lucidity, Petain hastily sketched what true forces the allies really had left?

Petain minced no words. He said:

"We French and British could strike successfully against the enemy now scattered blows which would use up German divisions to our advantage, but the means at our disposal are still insufficient to permit us to pound a hole in the German line sufficiently large to exploit that success.

"In such an attempt we are certain to make sacrifices of men and material which we would miss greatly at the decisive hour in 1918. We need another year more to make the necessary material, and at that time the question of finding manpower would also be solved by the arrival of the American contingents."

Happily the superior council agreed with Petain and supported the views he shared with Foch and adopted four building programs which I had drafted:

THE FIRST PROGRAM to build pursuit and bombardment planes.

SECONDLY, to build a rapid and mobile heavy artillery force.

THIRD, a single order for 2000 speedy and easily maneuvered small tanks.

TIMED FOR JULY 1

These four programs were so timed to be concluded by July 1, 1918, the date by which 1,000,000 American soldiers were promised to be delivered in France. It was July, 1918, that was set for the great liberating offensive so everything was timed to be ready.

Clemenceau was not yet in the government, but he presided over the foreign affairs commission, as well as the commission of the army in Senate. That second commission presided over by Clemenceau demanded of us late in July, 1917, to furnish an explanation of the government's plans.

With the necessary discretion, I exposed sketchily our future armament effort and the role to be assigned in 1918 to the American army. The question of manpower was bitterly discussed, Clemenceau putting an end to the argument with the words:

"All right, it is understood, by July, 1918, we will have 1,000,000 American soldiers on the front and we can march ahead then."

That is a phrase which can still be seen in the official stenographic notes of the council's session.

When September, 1917, came around the situation of the Russian army was hopeless. The question was again put to the government, over which, by that time, I presided as premier and head of the War Department, whether it was best to risk the great offensive immediately or await the Americans. That discussion ended as did the previous one.

The arguments of Foch and Petain carried the necessary weight to decide the government to await the day when the American manpower would swing the balance in the allies' favor. To the impatients Petain always answered with the stock phrase:

"I am awaiting the Americans and the tanks."

Step by step, as the allies' situation grew graver in the Near East, as the Bolsheviks triumphed in Petrograd, as Rumania capitulated, the question of manpower became more and more anguishing in France. Among youths from 19 to 32, only one-third at the most remained at the front. The others were either dead or injured so badly that they had to be sent home, or they were prisoners.

France was in such a bad situation that she had to send into fire her old men and boys of 18. Public opinion demanded insistently for unity of conscription among the allies and the increase of the front sections held by the British. French families, whose 18-year-old boys and whose grandfathers were taken for the trenches, wanted the families of the other allies to contribute the same.

DESPERATE SITUATION

Let us turn back to the Americans and we see General Pershing and Washington upholding their engagements. General Pershing, with his government in accord, had promised 2,000,000 American soldiers present in France in March, 1918. The transport of larger quantities was not scheduled until April, with troop ships bringing 800,000 to 900,000 men from March to July.

It is not generally known, and even many historians overlook it, but the real reason for this delay was that it was impossible to sacrifice to the transport of troop ships that were indispensable for raw material and merchandise absolutely necessary for the life of the European allies and their armies, and to permit their munition plants and arsenals to operate.

These imperious needs were such that it appeared necessary to set aside the troop movement schedule as drafted by President Wilson and General Pershing. But in proportion as the situation on the western front grew more menacing, public opinion pressed the governments for the hasten the arrival of the American contingents, and in doing so to use the greatest possible number of transports and submarine chasers.

This general sentiment became absolutely overbearing as soon as the great German drive on March 21st. But here began the second phase of America's intervention; the entrance of her contingents into battle.

Marshal Petain of France
"To the impatients, Petain always answered with the stock phrase: 'I am waiting the Americans and the tanks.' Petain favored separate attacks on German fronts so that German divisions could be used up to Allies advantage.

General John J. Pershing of U. S. A.
"It is possible to summarize General Pershing's accomplishments by saying that under his leadership America accomplished the superhuman achievement of forming her great army "Ready for Battle During the Battle."

Marshal Ferdinand Foch of France
"The arguments of Foch and Petain carried the necessary weight to the government to make decision to await the day when the American manpower would swing the balance in the Allies favor." Foch insisted on this order of affairs.

Allen Asks State to Honor Old M.D.'s

An appeal to the whole state to unite in honoring the group of oldest family doctors of New England on Wednesday, was issued today by Governor Allen.

"The coming of these men and women who have devoted their lives to the service of suffering humanity marks a new feature in the Tercentenary year," Governor Allen said. "I hope that the whole state will unite in honoring them."

The testimonial luncheon to the doctors at the City Club, sponsored by the New England Medical Center, will be broadcast over WEEI.

"There is not the slightest doubt in my mind that higher exemptions should be accorded."

Mother of Four Babies

"Although I am only 22 years old, I have four babies to care for. Before my first baby was born my mother urged me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound because I was so terribly weak. I had to lie down four or five times a day. After three bottles I could feel a great improvement. I still take the Vegetable Compound whenever I need it for it gives me strength to be a good mother to my family."—Mrs. Vern L. Dennings, 510 Johnson Street, Saginaw, Michigan.

TRIO QUIZZED IN THREAT AT SOCIETY BRIDE

Drink Cure Fails to Repair Romance

Anne Proud of Eaton's Vision

Bright-haired, vital, alive, young Anne Murdock had been three years at the Eaton Advertising Agency when her opportunity came—the opportunity to become Eaton's personal secretary. To work with a man of Laurence Eaton's breadth and power was something to [illegible] for Anne had ambitions [illegible] a suburban home with Ted O'Hara, who was on her own [illegible] of the ladder. [illegible] Anne [illegible] her [illegible] sister Katherine, who had lately [illegible] that [illegible] in the [illegible]. But Eaton [illegible] between his secretary and young O'Hara which leaves him wondering whether he may not have to surrender his efficient assistant to Cupid. Anne senses this and declares that she has no [illegible] whatever of [illegible].

CHAPTER XIV

During that campaign I ate, drank and slept wool from the sheep to the blanket. We gave them a new trade mark; we concentrated on advertising quality—the generations of tradition and integrity back of them.

"And now, I hope, I've won him ove rto my pet theory; that it's a waste of good material to throw your competitor's old employes out when you take them over." He paused and laughed. "I appear to be in the lecture room," he said apologetically.

"I was terribly interested, Anne told him. It was true. But if it hadn't been, she would have said so, anyway. She was a good secretary.

"I know it. I watched you during the first heated moments of the conference. You have a most expressive face. YoYu should never play poker. I ca nalways tell when things are going well or badly by your eyes. And because I rely on your judgment, you've become a sort of barometer."

Anne laughed. She [illegible] her employer in the [illegible] boyish moods which always followed a victory or the promise of one. Going home that night she thought how well she had grown to know him.

She saw him practically every day. She saw the quick temper which he controlled so well, the vitality, the occasional pettiness, the worry over delays, the rare evasions.

But she saw, too, the manner in which he handled big issues, the sureness of his judgments and decisions, and the never-sleeping vision [illegible] which was not locked in his desk at closing time, but which went everywhere with [illegible] broad of scope, working, planning, seeing ahead.

HAD VISION

It was this vision, coupled with the practical mind, the grasp of a situation and the dogged attention to detail which made him a big man. So big a man, in fact, that Anne found herself judging all other men by this difficult standard.

She was seeing him also in his home. For lately she had been called often to work there with him at night. At first they had worked in the office, but the office was never quite silent: there was always some one there. The telephone never [illegible].

Now, when Eaton had a piece of work to do which required the maximum of concentration, he found it practical to work in his small study at the apartment. On these occasions Linda would be out, returning late to drag her husband and his secretary from their work and insist that they rest—have something to eat and drink—before Anne started on the long trip home.

Upon one such occasion [illegible]

"My word," said Linda, appearing in the study some time after midnight, "you two are gluttons for punishment!"

The night was unreasonably warm. Eaton, his hair damp and lank on his forehead, one cheek branded with the mark of a blue pencil, a green shade over his eyes, looked up blindly, as if Linda's cool voice had called him back from another world and he could not adjust himself. Anne, pale with fatigue, the collar of her dress wilted and soiled, looked up, too, from the smaller typewriting desk which Eaton had had put in the room for her. She smiled at her employer's wife's frank admiration.

ANNE LOOKS WHITE

Linda had dined out and been to a play. She was wearing a charming grown, sea-green chiffon, from which her shoulders rose superbly.

"Gos, but she's lovely!" thought Anne with a miserable feeling of depression which certainly wasn't envy.

"I've ordered food," Linda told them briskly, "and you two will kindly rise and follow me. Miss Murdock looks ready to drop, Larry. Simon Legree was an angel of mercy compared with you. Don't you know the girl has to sleep long enough to be able to conduct your nefarious business

Alexander [illegible] Girl's Uncle-in-Law, Says Anonymous Note Is "Silly"

"You will never marry Whiteside unless [illegible] 000. Unless you pay [illegible] you will go the way the S[illegible] girl and the Corbett girl went. Look out for your folks."

[illegible] was revealed today by Alexander Whiteside, former corporation counsel and uncle [illegible] Whiteside. [illegible] police inspectors, attired in correct wedding garb, attended the wedding in St. Paul's Cathedral and three alleged extortionists were questioned today.

NOTIFIED POLICE

Former Corporation Counsel Whiteside said the letter was re[illegible]

"There was no address on the letter and no reference was made as to where the $5000 was to be placed nor was anything said about the party who wrote it being at the church to interrupt the wedding.

NOT HELD SERIOUS

"I am glad to correct, through the American, a wrong impression that has gone out through a morning paper. I merely took sensible precautions [illegible] guard against the wild chance of anything happening [illegible] on the police.

"The police officers declared that they did not regard the letter in any sense other than as an anonymous and silly communication that had no real threat of trouble."

Police decided today to question three men arrested Saturday afternoon in the Brookline home of Dr. Alfred Schmitt, retired dentist, as they were alleged to have been accepting $500 demanded in threatening message.

TRIO ARRESTED

These three are [illegible] lette, 26, of Marginal st., East Boston; Philip Capole, 22, of Endicott st., and Amelio Paone, 17, of Thatcher st., both of the North End, who were arraigned in Brookline court today.

Lose Pound-a-Week Menu

DIET NO. 12

A safe and sane diet, which should reduce weight at the rate of one pound a week, prepared by Dr. A. I. Ringer, consultant on metabolism for the Medical Information Bureau of the New York Academy of Medicine, is appearing daily in the Boston Evening American. Here is the twelfth day's diet:

BREAKFAST

One dish of canned peaches
Two hard-boiled eggs
Four tablespoonsful of cereal, without milk or sugar
Tea, one cup, with milk (no sugar)

LUNCH

Moderate portion filet of sole
Tomato salad
Thin slice of bread
Coffee, one cup, with milk (no sugar)

DINNER

One plate clear tomato soup
Moderate portion of roast ham
One boiled potatoe
Cabbage and apple salad
String beans
Coffee, one cup, with milk (no sugar)

Diet Hints

"You look so fat and healthy." That's a common greeting among friends. The reverse is, "You're looking so thin—aren't you well?"

Fat isn't the criterion of good looks and poor looks, says Dr. A. I. Ringer, consultant on metabolism for the Medical Information Bureau of the New York Academy of Medicine.

It's the underlying healthy conditions that count. People who are dieting to reduce their weight must be prepared to accept comments on their appearance from friends whom they haven't seen in months. If they are healthy—and they should be, if they follow a "safe and sane" diet—they can merely laugh at these remarks.

In sane reducing, eat plenty of vegetables. Moderate helpings of meat and fish are recommended.

5000 Will Attend Reunion by Parish

More than 5000 present and former parishioners of St. Augustine's parish, South Boston, are expected to attend the reunion tonight at [illegible] Hotel Statler.

The guests of honor will be the pastor, the Rev. Joseph Coppinger and his curates, and John J. Lydon, soldiers' relief commissioner, is chairman of the committee in charge.

SET RUM BOAT ON FIRE, FLEE

Pursued by Scituate coastguards, two supposed fishermen set fire to [illegible] day off Humarock, rowed the remaining short distance to the beach and escaped.

The coastguards rescued most of the 400 cases of uncut whiskey aboard but so badly was the boat burned that the name and number could not even be deciphered.

Capt. F. H. Cobbett and his crew of the Scituate coastguard station sighted the fishermen's craft while patroling, and because no fishermen cruise in those waters, set off in pursuit.

The rum-runner sighted the coastguards at the same time and headed north. They were losing ground, however, and they finally headed for shore.

CANARIES CHIRP WITH SINGERS TO MAKE QUINTET

NEW ROLE FOR BEBE DANIELS

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Motion Picture Editor, Universal Service

Copyright, 1930, by Universal Service.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 28.—There will be no chance for Bebe Daniels' public to get tired of hearing her sing. RKO has a plan whereby Bebe will alternate her musical comedy with a smart stage play, "Lawful Larceny," a stage play of smart comedy with a plot in which comedy and drama [illegible] part will follow "Dixiana." [illegible] "Lawful Larceny" [illegible] and it was one of [illegible]

Louella Parsons

An episode of Bebe's singing: she sings a duet with Harry Langdon at a party given by Mr. and Mrs. Michael Curtiz, and [illegible] may be a singing part for the former dough-faced boy, who was discovered by Warner Brothers as having something other than a funny face.

EVERY TIME a [illegible] an [illegible] meet or some significant event happens in [illegible] the studios take scenes of it for future use. On New Year's Day First National sent a cameraman over to photograph [illegible] the football game between Pittsburgh and the University of Southern California. [illegible] was used as a background for Alice White's next picture [illegible] Alice has been working in "The Widow From Chicago," an underworld story, and her return to "college" [illegible] will probably be good news to the college boys [illegible] Alice is somewhat [illegible] favorite.

Speaking of football, [illegible] Ralph Hasse of West Point, who [illegible] was in San Francisco. He will be the coach for the [illegible] football game [illegible] know about football has not been written.

Marilyn Miller, Fifi Dorsay, Sue Carrol, Mack Sennett, Wesley Ruggles and Bert Wheeler among those present at the opening of the new Olsen Night Club. Darryl Zanuck taking charge of the microphone at the opening of "Mammy." Cyril Maude taken on a personal inspection of the Paramount studios. This is all today. See you tomorrow.

Symphony Program

The season of Boston Symphony concerts will close next Friday afternoon and Saturday evening in Symphony Hall. Dr. Serge Koussevitzky will conduct at these concerts Weber's overture to Oberon, the tone poem "Lilacs" of Edward Burlingame Hill, Ravel's Rapsodie Espagnole and the First Symphony of Brahms in C-minor.

FINE TALENT FOR N. V. A.

The list of names of those [illegible] for next [illegible] management [illegible] program has reached [illegible] proportions and the plans now indicate that every [illegible] star appearing in Boston will volunteer in aid of this mammoth charitable enterprise and will contribute to the entertainment at both [illegible] Albee and the Metropolitan on that evening.

Included in the [illegible] Owen, Walter Woolf, George Hassell, Dorothy Stone, Bobbie [illegible] Henshaw, Alma Rubens, Paula Stone, Olive Sibley, Cynthia Foley, Mrs. Fred Stone and scores of others. In addition there will be more than 25 jazz bands.

Costal Plane

Some call it desolate and drear,
This barren, strange domain
That has forever hovering here,
While pale fogs creep or sun-rays pour

For here the gaunt, sloping land
Boasts no fair company
Of friendly plants and shrubs that stand,
Like comrades, touching hand to hand,
No voice of tree to tree.

No meadows spread their robes of green
To clothe this steel plane,
No silverside weave their grateful screen,
No shelter here for man is seen
No foothill leaves its frame

BREADLINES GO, EMPLOYMENT INCREASES

By B. C. FORBES

New York, April 28—The breadlines in New York are going to be abolished this week.

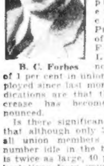
Unemployment has definitely turned upwards. The ranks of employable idle workers in New York City have been greatly thinned. From most centers come reports of more or less improvement in employment conditions. President Green of the American Federation of Labor announced a gain of 1 per cent in union members employed since last month, and all indications are that the rate of increase has become more pronounced.



B. C. Forbes

Is there significance in the fact that although only 20 per cent of all union members are idle, the number idle in the building trades is twice as large, 40 per cent? Exhortations from governmental and other sources to hasten the building of new homes have not met with much response. Is one reason that a great many working class and small-salaried families feel that the wages paid building tradesmen for a five-day week are out of line with what these families earn? Several of the writer's friends have voiced this attitude. Also, some who did recently undertake to build have complained that they did not feel they got a dollar's worth of work for a dollar's pay from all those employed.

It is an economic axiom as old as the hills that high prices discourage consumption. May it not be that hourly rates now paid building tradesmen discourage demand for their services by families of moderate means? Seeing that 40 out of every 100 unionized building artisans are idle, the question is commended to the attention of their leaders.

The artificial efforts exerted to bolster up wheat prices by large purchases financed from the public purse solely for the purpose of removing supplies temporarily from the market have, like high building wages, had a distinctly restrictive effect on demand. Our exports of wheat have dwindled alarmingly. They have fallen more than 50 per cent below expectation, with no sign thus far of doing better. This means that other wheat-growing countries, not protected by a costly governmental umbrella, are supplying a large share of the world's markets which formerly was enjoyed by the United States. On Friday, May wheat at Chicago dropped to within 2 cents of a dollar a bushel, a price disappointing alike to growers and to the business world since restricted purchasing power by our agricultural population naturally restricts trade generally.

Cotton, also dabbled in by the Federal Farm Board, has been faring none too well. Towards the end of the week it went to 15½ cents for spot at New Orleans, 14⅝ cents at Memphis and 15⅜ cents at Houston. In this staple, too, the export demand this season has been disappointing.

The industrial picture is somewhat brighter.

Railway freight is moving in modestly larger volume. Bank check statistics reflect some gain in activity. Road-making and heavy building work are expanding. The oil and natural gas industries are spending freely in the construction of new pipe lines of magnitude. The steel industry maintains production which would be regarded as satisfactory were not comparisons always made with figures of last year, when the industry was enjoying a spectacular boom. The same comment applies to the motor industry; it promises to have a normal year, but not a duplication of last year's record-breaking boom. The coal industry is doing a little better. Shipbuilding yards have more orders than at any time in recent years.

Retail trade, which broke no records during the Easter season, is only so-so. Some sections show gains, others declines. Certain retail chains are doing better than holding their own, but others, including the leading mail order houses, are not matching last year's unusual pace. The general community price trend continues mildly downwards, a condition prevailing throughout most of the world.

Pools continue active on both sides of the market. A bearish prediction by W. C. Durant, the largest and most enthusiastic operator during the long bull market, caused considerable astonishment in speculative circles, as it had been known that he was working to send various stocks higher, including his old favorite, General Motors.

That the market was due for a setback was the conviction of leading financial interests some little time ago, as told here. The opinion in the same quarters is that the reaction may go somewhat further before another vigorous rise sets in. Nothing serious, however, is expected.

STOCKS SELL LOWER IN BOSTON

Prices were lower in trading on the Boston Stock Exchange today with narrow changes scattered throughout the list. American Telephone dropped almost 2 points and New England Telephone was down a point. General Alloys held steady. Gillette gained over 2 points and Hygrade Lamp advanced a point.

Warren Bros. dipped 2 points, Stone & Webster 1½ and Quincy was down over 2. Point or more losses were shown by the following issues: New Haven, United Shoe, Eastern Gas & Fuel, Boston Elevated and Bigelow Sanford.

Stock of International Button-Hole Sewing Machine Co. at 15½ on the Boston Stock Exchange, is selling at the highest price since the war. For years the stock has been inactive, there being but 50,000 shares ($10 par value) outstanding, and the range for the past decade up to the past fortnight has been between 2 and 10½. The 1929 range was 9 to 10¼.

The company, which owns foreign patents for Reece buttonhole and fishing machines, had an unusually successful year in 1929, showing net earnings of $204,979, equivalent to $4.10 per share or 25 per cent of present selling price. Earnings in recent years have averaged between $1.35 and $1.47 per share.

Foreign demand for Reece machines was abnormally brisk last year. According to an official, business for 1930 to date is fully up to that of last year. Thus far gains have been made in all foreign countries.

Business of International consists of leasing the Reece machines abroad. Machines on lease, as of Jan. 1, 1930, had a value of $1,191,850.

The company has been paying dividends at the rate of a per cent (80 cents) annum. As of Jan. 1, 1930, surplus amounted to $1,189,204 against capital of $500,000, giving book value of $33.78 per share of stock. Deducting patents, carried at $487,140, book value amounted to $23.84 per share.

Cotton Steady in New York Market

New York, April 28 (INS)—Cotton futures were steady today with May at 15.9., July at 16.06, October old at 15.00, October new at 14.75, December old at 15.13, December new at 14.88, January old at 15.21, January new 14.93 and March at 15.16.

Ann Arbor Reports

Ann Arbor R. R. reports for quarter ended March 31 net income to $10,301 after taxes and charges, equal to 26 cents a share on the 40,000 shares of 5 per cent preferred, against $165,871, or $3.56 a share on 32,500 shares of common in first quarter of 1929 after dividend requirements on the preferred stock.

CURB MARKET RALLIES WITH NEW SUPPORT

By CLAUDE A. JAGGER

New York, April 28 (AP)—The curb market broke sharply under heavy selling of the utilities during the early hours of trading today, but substantial support appeared in the early afternoon, and rallies were accomplished here and there, under the leadership of some of the oils.

The selling movement appeared to be largely a continuation of the liquidation to which the market was subjected during the major part of last week.

Although week-end business reviews reported continued slow improvement, the upturn in business has not displayed the vitality expected at this time of year, and this prompted traders further to lighten accounts.

American Superpower, United Light A, and American Light new, recent strong spots, reacted 2 to 3 points, respectively, before meeting with support. Central States Electric and Brazilian Traction dropped about 2 points, and Duke Power, normally a wide mover, tumbled 7 points. Electric Bond and Share sagged moderately.

Gulf and Vacuum were strong features in the oils, each selling up moderately, the former getting into the neighborhood of its best level of the year. Standard of Indiana and Cities Service eased moderately. In the mines, Noranda declined to another new low for the year.

Industrials were highly irregular. Agfa Ansco and Driver Harris each rose a few points to new high ground for the year soon after the opening.

Deere new stock reacted a few points, and Crocker Wheeler sold off a little.

Singer Manufacturing continued to climb, rising 10 points to a new high at 560.

COTY BUSINESS HAS A GAIN

New York, April 28—Business done by Coty, Inc.'s, United States and European subsidiaries so far this year has run ahead of a year ago. With margin of profit remaining comparatively steady, earnings for first quarter will probably exceed the net of $1,169,745 or 88 cents a share on 1,320,979 shares in first quarter of 1929.

Earnings will not include proportionate share of earnings of foreign subsidiaries, reflecting only dividends received by Coty, Inc. With earnings to be figured on 1,492,655 shares outstanding at end of the year, Coty will therefore receive in first quarter little benefit from its investment in these subsidiaries, to acquire which Coty last year sold 103,773 shares. Return must await inclusion of earnings of foreign companies to show true earning power. Inclusion of these 103,773 shares may lower per-share earnings for first quarter somewhat from 88 cents a share in first quarter last year.

Recovery from late 1929 and early 1930 adverse conditions was quick. Currently Coty's business shows no signs of any influence by lessened business activity.

Even though volume declined in first three months of 1929, the large gain in first nine months was sufficient to carry income from Coty, Inc., and domestic subsidiaries for the full year to a new high. For nine months earnings were $3,628,313, against only $3,026,710 in first nine months of 1928, and net for 1929 reached $4,058,297, against $4,053,019 in 1928. This small increase did not reflect proportionate share in earnings of foreign subsidiaries, although reported profits included $92,096 dividends from foreign companies.

Aroostook Earning Figures Increased

Bangor & Aroostook Railroad reports for March a surplus after charges of $340,212, comparing with surplus after charges of $248,979 for March, 1929. For quarter ended March 31, surplus after charges was $866,252, comparing with surplus after charges of $653,962 for the corresponding period in 1929.

Loew's Earnings of 28 Weeks Up

Loew's Inc., reports for 28 weeks ended March 14, 1930, net profit after depreciation and taxes, of $8,243,584, against $5,251,958 in the same weeks a year ago. Operating profit before depreciation and taxes, for the period was $10,893,972, compared with $7,376,267 a year ago.

Byllesby Holders Are Offered Rights

New York, April 28 (AP)—Holders of the "A" and "B" stock of H. M. Byllesby & Co. have been offered rights to subscribe to one additional share for each share held of record May 5, at $50 a share.

Lead Output Larger in March, Bureau Statistics Show

New York, April 28 (AP)—The world output of pig lead in March totalled 163,478 tons, compared with 147,725 tons in February, and 160,450 tons in March, 1929, according to the American Bureau of Metal Statistics.

COTTON MEN TO MEET HERE

Representatives of the cotton industry in Holland and Mexico will be among the speakers at the banquet of the National Association of Cotton Manufacturers Thursday evening, the closing feature of the two-day convention which opens in the Copley-Plaza Wednesday afternoon.

A. Ledeboer of Enschede, Holland, a member of the Netherlands Chamber of Commerce, now making a tour of inspection of cotton mills in this country, and J. Rivero Quijano, president of the National Association of Cotton Manufacturers of Mexico, will bring a message from their respective countries. Former United States Senator Henry F. Lippit of Rhode Island, the oldest living ex-president of the association, will extend greetings.

The movement to take the industry out of the long-hour class will predominate in the discussions beginning at the session Wednesday afternoon and in the closing address of the convention, Thursday night, which will be given by Henry P. Kendall, president of the Kendall Company, an organization with mills in the North and South.

The National Association, which is the pioneer trade organization of this country, will observe its 75th anniversary at this convention.

The accomplishments of the past will be reviewed by President Lincoln Baylies, Wednesday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock, and his address will be followed by a discussion as to how best to meet the problems of 1930. Eben E. Whitman, vice-president of the William Whitman Company, with interests in mills in the North and South, and Donald Comer, president and treasurer of the Avondale Mills, Birmingham, Ala., and A. D. Whiteside, president of the Wool Institute, will be the speakers.

Thursday morning at 10:30 the situation regarding raw cotton will be considered. C. O. Moser, vice-president of the American Co-operative Association, Dallas, Tex.; Carl Williams, member of the federal farm board, and Sidney Y. West, director of the American Cotton Shippers' Association, Little Rock, Ark., will address the gathering.

In the afternoon, R. H. Dick, president of Barrington Associates, New York, will talk on merchandising. Mrs. Elizabeth MacDonald, head of the consumer research department of the Frigidaire division of the General Motors Corp., will speak on the problem of the consumer and Allyn B. McIntire, vice-president of the Pepperell Mfg. Co., will have for his subject, "Textile Advertising."

BEACON ADDS TO STATIONS

Colonial Beacon Oil Co., name of which has just been changed from the former title, Beacon Oil Co., now operates retail service stations in each of the New England States and in the State of New York. As of December 31, last the total of such stations had been increased to 447. The number of bulk distributing stations owned & leased by the company or its subsidiaries was increased during 1929 to 100, having a total storage capacity of approximately 627,000 barrels. Storage facilities of the main refinery at Everett, Mass., were increased last year to 460,000 barrels.

An Interview Between Irving Fisher, Professor of Economics, Yale University, and Royal Meeker

U. S. Commissioner of Labor Statistics, 1913-20

New Haven, Ct., April 28. Royal Meeker, who has granted me the following interview on unemployment during the present business recession, was commissioner of labor statistics by appointment of President Wilson, 1913-20, during a period of unusual fluctuations in employment and working conditions, including American participation in the war. Mr. Meeker was later for several years chief of the scientific division, international labor office of the League of Nations and Secretary of Labor and Industry of Pennsylvania. He has answered my questions bearing on the present labor situation, therefore, out of a wide and varied experience. The first part of this interview follows:

Do you agree with the recent expression of the London Times that there is a fallacy in the notion that increased mechanization of industry means increased employment?

Irving Fisher.

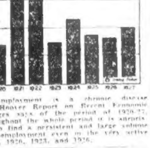
I do not know what the London Times editorial writer had in mind. I have seen only a summary of the editorial declaring "the theory that the mechanization of industry increases employment is a fallacy."

The facts are that the utilization of power machinery has enormously increased production of foodstuffs, raw materials of all kinds and especially finished goods. Increased production has enabled—nay, it has forced—population to increase during the 19th century at a rate never before known or dreamed of, in order to supply the demand for more consumers as well as more producers of goods. Had there been no "Industrial Revolution" it is conservative to say that the population of the world today would be not more than half what it now is. In 1820 the peoples of the world numbered only about 800,000,000 and had increased scarcely at all for centuries. Now the world's population is estimated at about 1,790,000,000 and is still growing rapidly.

STANDARDS IMPROVED.

"The "mechanization of industry" has forced the population of England to increase more than five-fold since Malthus announced his famous doctrine of population in 1798. During the same time the standards of comfort have greatly improved. In the face of these indisputable facts, it cannot be maintained that the numbers employed have remained constant or have declined because industry has been "mechanized."

What the Times editorial writer may have meant is that so long as improved machines and methods are being continuously introduced, industry is in a constant state of "upsetness" because men are being displaced from old jobs and lured or forced into new jobs.



Unemployment is a chronic disease. The Hoover Report on Recent Economic Changes says of the period of 1920-27, "Throughout the whole period it is appalling to find a persistent and large volume of unemployment even in the very active years, 1920, 1923, and 1926."

The first effect of an improved machine or method of production is, of course, to displace men. That is why the workers have always opposed the introduction of labor-saving machinery. The worker does not care anything about the increased number of jobs at increased real wages which will come ten years or even one year hence. He does have a vital interest in his present job, his next meal, his next shirt, and the money to pay his next month's rent. Mechanization does benefit future workers at the expense of present workers—an expense that sometimes spells for the displaced worker financial ruin and physical suffering from hunger, cold and exposure. Industrial progress is achieved through the vicarious suffering of the workers who are thrown out of jobs today, that their sons and grandsons may have better jobs with higher pay in the future.

The statement that machines displace men seems at first glance to contradict the statement that machines create more jobs. These two seemingly contradict views are really not two views but one and are not contradictory. They are merely different aspects of the same thing. Machines do take the place of men in the short run; but in the long run, they do increase production in the mechanized industries and create new jobs for men first in other industries and finally in the mechanized industries.

SHOULD KEEP PACE.

Accepting the estimate by Dr. Wesley C. Mitchell of the National Bureau of Economic Research that there has been a "net increase of unemployment between 1920 and 1927, which exceeds 650,000 people"—this estimate being based on "minimum figures"—what, in your opinion, is the prospect of making employment keep pace with a normal increase in population?

I do not accept the estimate that a "net increase of unemployment between 1920 and 1927, which exceeds 650,000 people" exists. It may be, perhaps, that an additional 650,000 persons of working age were not employed in any "gainful occupations" in 1927, as compared with 1920, but such a finding would not mean an increase of 650,000 in the ranks of the involuntarily unemployed. Many persons who ordinarily never would have worked for wages were working in 1920. When they lost their jobs they never tried to get back into "gainful employment." This was true of many thousands of "farmerettes" and other "war workers" both male and female. The proportion of persons of working age who are in schools and colleges has increased greatly,—one might say alarmingly.

I am inclined to agree with Professor Mitchell to this extent, that the number and the proportion of those who want jobs and can't get them has increased considerably since 1920. But even if we could prove beyond doubt that the proportion of the unemployed has increased since 1920, that year of abnormal employment, this would not prove that "mechanization of industry," by increasing the per capita production of workers, must inevitably reduce the demand for labor and add continually, year after year, to the ever lengthening bread lines of the "technologically unemployed." It is quite to be expected that there must be a decrease since 1920 in the percentage of persons of working age who are working. This merely marks an adjustment toward "normalcy."

MACHINES NOT TO BLAME.

It is undoubtedly true that unemployment is a chronic disease in a dynamic industrial society in which new inventions are continuously being made. I think the so-called "technological unemployment" today is no more serious than it has been many times in the past.

But chronic unemployment which, at irregular intervals, swells into a terrifying menace to our whole economic and political systems is too wasteful, too cruel, and too dangerous to be allowed to continue as in the past. Violent industrial revolutions should be restrained and controlled just as we are beginning to limit and control armed conflicts.

It is stupid to permit ruthless profit-seeking individuals and corporations to throw the whole industrial organization out of gear by suddenly introducing new machines and methods which will turn thousands of workers into the streets without the means of earning the means to live. If unemployment, either chronic or acute, is to be kept down below the danger line, it can only be done by carefully planning our program of production to meet our reasonable consumption requirements to the end that workers can be kept employed continuously throughout the year and from year to year. Changes in technique of production must proceed, but they should take place in orderly fashion.

The interview on the question of the machine age in relation to unemployment is concluded in next Monday's Irving Fisher articles.

STOCK MARKET PRICES LOWER FOR WEEK

By H. B. BROUGHAM

(Irving Fisher Service)

The market in common industrial stocks took in sail last week, closing 1.54 per cent below the preceding week's close and down 2.5 per cent below the year's high of 165.8 reached April 11. It was generally called a corrective reaction, such as might be expected in an upward-trending market after panic lows.

Business fared worse during March than was expected. The quarterly earnings reports were in many cases disappointing. Realization that recovery from the present business recession will be gradual had its part. But adjustments in stock prices are now made after the bottom of the recession has been reached and passed. The trend is still upward.

Seventeen of the twenty industrial groups declined last week, with motors the heaviest loser, off 6.4 per cent. Rails and preferred stocks have held a downward trend for four weeks, while utilities and all industrials have declined for but two weeks.

Average daily tradings of industrial common shares on the New York Stock Exchange last week gained 13 per cent over the preceding week, in which tradings had fallen off from the April 12 high for the year by 19 per cent.

They are now but 7.9 per cent below that high, and well above the average for this year, with rails, utilities and preferred stocks showing conspicuous losses. Tradings in all stocks rose by only $10,500,000 to $288,290,000.

BOND MARKET PRICES FIRM

New York, April 29 (AP). Listed bonds were firm but dull in a slow session today. The only active issues in the earlier trading were those affected by special conditions, such as the convertibles which moved irregularly lower on the morning softness of stock prices.

Investment rails clung close to Saturday's final prices on limited inquiry from institutional sources. Utilities and industrials were quiet and steady.

American Telephone convertible 4½s sagged about 3 points, but the selling was only moderate and the bonds met with resistance at the lower levels. General Theatres Equipment 6s made an early upturn of 3 points and were active around 116. Southern Pacific 4½s with warrants, International Telephone 4½s and Warner Brothers Pictures 6s changed fractionally.

Santa Fe General 4s, Frisco 4½s, Missouri Pacific 5s, National Dairy 5¼s, Chesapeake & Ohio 4½s and Utah Power 5s were firm spots. United States governments and foreign bonds remained dull. French 7s improved a shade on a fair turnover.

MOTOR TESTING CORPORATION IS FORMED

Chicago, April 28. Incorporation of the Stromberg Motoscope Corporation, whose business is the manufacture of motor testing devices, was announced today. The incorporators are E. A. Stromberg, F. L. Wilk and Charles T. Adams.

Mr. Stromberg is the son of Alfred Stromberg, founder of the Stromberg-Carlson Telephone Company, Stromberg Carburetor Company of America, Inc., and the Stromberg Electric Company. Mr. Wilk is president of Wilk, Clark & Co., Chicago securities organization, and Mr. Adams is a member of the legal firm of Adams, Hawley, Brown & Adams.

The initial capitalization of the company will consist of 5000 shares of Class "A" participating preferred stock of a par value of $25 per share and 30,000 shares of Class "B" common stock of no-par value. The plan is to issue, shortly, the Class "A" and Class "B" stock in units of one share of "A" and one share of "B" stock at $30 per unit.

Ownership of the Motoscope Corporation of America and the Wilk-Kerr Company, a co-partnership, is to be acquired in forming the new company through the exchange of the common stock of the new corporation.

The new company, in its Chicago plant, which has been in operation for some months, is manufacturing a device for the testing and control of all types of motors in automobiles and airplanes.

In addition to the incorporators, directors of the Stromberg Motoscope Corporation will be A. L. Dennison, secretary and director of the Stromberg Electric Company, and Charles Fargo, vice-president of the Central Air Terminal Company. Mr. Stromberg is president, Mr. Adams secretary and Mr. Wilk treasurer of the corporation.

WESTINGHOUSE SALES GAIN

Pittsburgh, April 28. Earnings of Westinghouse Air Brake Co. for first quarter showed pronounced gain over corresponding period last year when net was $1,924,893 after depreciation and federal taxes, equal to 60 cents a share on 3,172,111 no-par shares.

Both Air Brake and its subsidiary, Union Switch & Signal, have a large volume of orders which will keep plants producing at a high rate until late in the year. A large number of installations of locomotive cab signal systems are being made. In addition, Westinghouse has several attractive orders for Hannauer car retarder systems.

All indications so far point to better results for 1930 than in 1929. Westinghouse is one of the few organizations in Pittsburgh district enjoying a good volume at satisfactory prices.

On April 1 the automotive brake division of Westinghouse Air Brake was turned over to the newly formed Bendix-Westinghouse Automotive Brake Co., jointly owned by Bendix and Westinghouse. Through the Bendix affiliation with General Motors, a large market for automotive air brakes will be secured for Westinghouse. Bendix now supplies most brakes used on General Motors cars. Westinghouse will continue to manufacture the automotive air brakes to be distributed by the new company.

The field of air brakes for buses and large trucks has been showing rapid growth.

President Bendix of Bendix Aviation Corp., here to develop plans for expansion of the automotive air brake business, said combination of research activities of the two organizations would be of great benefit. He said most brake products were the result of enormous expenditures for experimental work. Merger of brake departments will eliminate much duplicated effort and give each company the advantage of the other's research efforts.

The consolidation also ended patent litigation between Westinghouse and Bragg, Kleisrath over right to make vacuum brakes for automobiles. Bragg, Kleisrath was recently acquired by Bendix. The vacuum brakes are designed for pleasure cars and light trucks, while the air brakes are adapted to heavier vehicles.

American Glue Is Quoted Higher

In Boston over-the-counter market American Glue common is quoted 60 bid. This compares with a recent quotation of 53 to 56.

Ticker Talk

By THE WALL STREET SPECTATOR

General Electric

The present confusing series of price movements in the market makes it useless for the trader to enter commitments in stocks based on ratio of market price to earnings. The market is evenly divided between two powerful speculative factions and the action of the individual stock should be watched for the clue to its particular trend. Despite the somewhat precarious levels at which this premier industrial issue is quoted it has held its ground in determined fashion in the past fortnight, and close market observers predict that this stock will continue to reflect the wealth of potentialities which its dominant world wide position in many fields of endeavor give to it.

Brooklyn-Manhattan Transit

There has been some quiet accumulation of this stock in recent weeks, based upon the steady upward trend of earnings of the company, and the attractive yield offered from its annual $4 dividend. Net earnings for the current year are expected to approximate $7 per common share, a considerable margin over results of previous years. In addition there are speculative possibilities arising from the favored position of this company in the plans for the unification of the New York city rapid transit lines.

Foster-Wheeler

This stock was one of the select few to close the week in an impressive display of buoyancy sufficient to carry it through its former high, and within a fraction of its all-time high established last year. Its growth in its particular field has been exceptional with net earnings in 1929 of $6.05 per common share, comparing with $2.80, and $1.15 in the two preceding years. Orders received by the company in the first three months of this year set a new high record, and showed an increase of more than 21 per cent over the similar period of 1929.

Woolworth Easter Sales Set Record

F. W. Woolworth's business in Easter week exceeded any previous year at $7,450,515, an increase of $176,855 or 2.43 per cent over Easter business last year, which came in final week of March.

Because Easter business occurred in April this year, March sales were $2,042,691, or 8.33 per cent less than March, 1929, which included Easter shopping. First-quarter sales were $638,483 or 1.01 per cent below first quarter of 1929. April sales will run well above $25,000,000, an increase of better than $3,000,000 over April last year.

New England Power

Considerable favor is attached to the long-pull outlook for this issue in State Street circles. New England Power Association and subsidiaries report for March net income for reserves and dividends of $923,300, against $832,397 for the same month of last year. Preferred dividends of New England Power Association for the month amounted to $328,542 against requirements of $274,981 a year ago, leaving balance for reserves and common dividends of $594,758, as compared with $557,416 for March, 1929. President Frank D. Comerford states in connection with the March figures: "The March results show a continuation of abnormally low industrial activity in our territory. Water conditions were good and largely because of this net earnings showed a satisfactory increase. So far April has shown some increase in industrial activity."

Virginia Iron Report

Virginia Iron, Coal & Coke Co. reports for quarter ended March 31 net loss of $41,153 after interest, depreciation, depletion, etc., against net of $33,048 in first quarter of 1929, equal to $1.32 a share on 25,000 shares of 5 per cent preferred.

Silver's Quarter Earns $168,148

International Silver Co. and subsidiaries report net profit after depreciation and provision for federal taxes of $168,148 for the quarter ended March 31, 1930, against $268,819 in the corresponding quarter of 1929. Net profit is equivalent to 59 cents a share on the common after preferred dividends as compared with $1.79 a share in the same period a year ago.

New York stock prices were off somewhat last week under a heavier volume of tradings. The commodity price level achieved a record low since 1916. Purchasing power of the dollar rose. Details appear elsewhere on this page.

Dollar Value at Best in 14 Years

A dollar will now buy more goods than at any previous time during the last 14 years; a further decline in the commodity price level took place last week.

Using index numbers with 1926 equalling 100, the purchasing power of the dollar last week rose to 110.8. The wholesale commodity price index receded 0.55 per cent to a new low of 90.2.

The long commodity decline reached 90.1 for the week ended April 5, but the next two weeks saw recovery to 91.3. It was hoped at that time the price level would stage a sustained recovery, but the past two weeks have developed further weakness instead of strength, unstabilizing the commodity price level still more.

More than four times as many commodities fell as rose last week, while the movement was general throughout the groups.

New City Financing Bids Are Sought

Nashua, N. H., will receive bids until 10 a. m., April 30, for $100,000 loan, dated May 1, and payable Dec. 19.

Adams will receive bids until noon, April 29, for $26,000 4 per cent sewer bonds, dated May 1, and payable 1931 to 1956.

Arlington will receive bids until 2 p. m., April 28, for $200,000 loan, dated May 1, and payable Nov. 7.

NEW ENGLAND AIR TOUR IS APPROVED

By GEORGE HAMBLIN

Official sanction of the New England Air Tour, sponsored by the New England Council, has been obtained from the National Aeronautic Association, and the Federation Aeronautique Internationale, according to R. W. Bowdoin of the New England Council.

The official sanction was signed by Orville Wright, father of aviation, as chairman of the contest committee of the national body. Maj. Luke Christopher of Washington, has been chosen referee of the tour, and Capt. Clarence M. Knox, commissioner of aviation for Connecticut, and chairman of the technical committee of the tour, has been named official representative of the N. A. A.

The tour is scheduled to start from Springfield May 27, visit practically every large city and town in New England, making overnight stops at Concord, N. H., New Bedford and Hartford, and finishing at Bowles Airport, Springfield, May 30. The tour will arrive at the new million dollar field in time for the dedication, on that date, and will remain for the Springfield air races, May 31 and June 1.

Thirty planes have been entered in the tour, and no more will be accepted, due to the size of some of the airports to be visited. A pace-making flight, surveying the entire distance, will be made two weeks before the tour starts, with representatives of the various committees of the Springfield Chapter, N. A. A., Maj. Christopher, and A. Pendleton Tolliver, of the airport division, U. S. Department of Commerce. Tolliver has been appointed by Maj. Clarence M. Young, head of the aeronautics branch of the Department of Commerce, to personally survey the route to be covered.

If any field is found to be unsuitable, or any stretch of country found dangerous, corrections will be made immediately in the itinerary.

Missing Wife Sends Telegram on Plans

Mrs. Dorothy Sholds of Chase st., Beverly, 20-year-old mother who disappeared on April 18, sent her mother a telegram from Lynn that she was going to Connecticut, according to information given to the Lynn police.

Mrs. Shold's mother, Mrs. L. Cooper, of Essex ct., was told in the telegram that her daughter had "a good proposition" in Connecticut. She requested the mother to look after the grandchild. Oscar Sholds, the husband, said his wife came to Lynn on a visit and then suddenly disappeared.

Malden Civic Heads Attend Wedding

Portland, Me., April 28—Mayor William Hastings of Malden, Mass., ex-Mayor John D. Devir and the board of aldermen of Malden, were present last night at the wedding of Samuel J. Lansky, Malden aldermen, to Miss Anne Dorfman of this city and Boston, in the Lafayette Hotel. Rabbi Moses Shoet, assisted by the Rev. Hyman Shapiro, officiated, using the single ring service beneath a canopy bower of cut flowers.

Gangster Refuses to Name Assassin

Chicago, April 28 (INS)—Shot twice in the abdomen, Ben Butler, Capone gangster, was dying in the Bridewell Hospital today, refusing to divulge the reasons for the deed to police.

"It's death for me," the dying gangster muttered, "and what business is it of yours how I got it."

tomorrow without dying at the post?"

"Ten minutes?" begged Eaton, but he observed Anne with sudden anxiety. She did look white; the dark blue eyes were heavy and circled with fatigue.

"No, not five! Come along this instant! Roberts has sandwiches, coffee and fruit cup and things. I dodged the Garrett's supper party in order to break up this little tete-a-tete!"

gxandyw

Eaton rose, filled with compunction, yet casting a reluctant glance at the desk. It had been pleasant to work there in the quiet room at top speed, with Anne beside him, silent and quick and . . and near.

"Nice reputation you're giving me!" he told Linda.

"My dear you deserve it. You forget that Miss Murdock is not of your superior sex, does not stand five-feet-ten or so, does not weigh 160 pounds or whatever it is."

"I'm sorry," Eaton told Anne. "Why didn't you stop me?"

Anne rose, tired in every muscle. "Why should I?" she asked him. "I'm not tired. I was glad to get the work done. I—enjoyed it," she said with a faint suggestion of defiance, looking at Linda.

But Linda only smiled and led the way to the supper table.

A day or so later, Mrs. Eaton, motoring to a polo game at Fort Hamilton with Jameson, remarked resignedly:

"I tried to persuade Larry to come but he's working today, and then catching a train to Washington. He likes polo. He used to play on a scratch team, but he hasn't lately."

Jameson answered, his hands steady on the wheel of the high-geared roadster: "He'll be busy with golf soon."

"Oh, he plays so sporadically; too hard when he does, too rarely to do him any real good. If it weren't for that trainer who comes in and puts him through the mill every morning he wouldn't keep fit." After a moment she said: "Dick, I think Larry's little secretary is falling in love with him!"

"That's a—pity," Jameson answered carefully. "Does he know it?"

"Not yet. Perhaps she doesn't, either. Poor Andrews was mad about him, and he never guessed until she left. She went off at the deep end, hysterical and all that. No; he didn't tell me. It came to me in a roundabout way from the sister of one of the girls in the art department. And all she said was: 'I understand Miss Andrews has had a nervous breakdown.'

"That was enough for me. But Larry was deaf, dumb and blind while she was with him. I was sorry for her, and I'm sorry for this girl. She's pretty and young, and life surely holds more for her than sitting around taking orders from a man who doesn't know she exists except for his business convenience."

Jameson was not so sure that Eaton didn't know Anne existed. But he said merely: "It happens often. Office wives."

"Is that what you call them?" asked Linda, delighted.

"Not original with me, I assure you. It's as current a term as T. B. M."

"Perhaps; but I never heard it before. Office wives. It's odd," mused Linda, "the complete separation of personality."

"How do you mean?"

"Office and home. In a way that little Murdock girl knows far more about Larry than I do."

EATON'S FRIEND

Jameson was Lawrence Eaton's friend. He liked him. He admired him. But Jameson was in love with Eaton's wife. He was an honorable man. He was careful never to overstep the limits he had imposed upon himself. He was grateful for what she gave him; a close, understanding friendship.

He might easily have said something, given her a hint; he knew that he was much in her confidence. But he said nothing, for his emotions were involved. Still, he was no more than human and could not help voicing a warning, not, be it said to his credit, in malice.

"The little Murdock is a different type from Miss Andrews, Linda. It would be one thing to awaken to the devotion of an unattractive woman of 40 and another to awaken to——"

"Anne's?" Linda was thoughtful. "I suppose so. But I'm not alarmed. Larry has had his moments. I've known and said nothing. There was nothing to say. Besides, we understand each other. He knows that I would not tolerate anything of the sort you suggest—any more than he would tolerate its counterpart in me."

After a moment they spoke of other things and presently, reaching the fort, parked the car and took their seats. The beautiful ponies raced down the long green stretch.

Overheard a plane was stunting lazily; not far off were the blue waters of the Narrows. The band struck up some commonplace ballad of the day, but oddly stirring in that setting. The captain of one of the teams galloped past, a heavy man, a perfect performer. Setting back, Linda said:

"What a game. What a game!"

She had forgotten about Anne and Eaton. But Jameson had not. If Anne were really in love with her employer? If, as was on the cards, Eaton came to a realization of that fact?

NO COMPARISON

Not that there was any comparison between the two women, thought Jameson, who loved Linda and was loyal to her, but he and Larry Eaton were two different men. Eaton was immersed in the business he'd built up—and Linda frankly had no interest in his work save to deplore that he gave too much time to it. But Anne's interest was probably keen, doubtless unfeigned. There was a meeting place made to order.

Between Linda and Larry there was no common ground, pondered Jameson uncomfortably, unless it was the ground of physical passion. But that, after 10 years of slow drifting apart, Jameson doubted, or preferred to doubt.

"Goal for the Whites!" exclaimed Linda.

He turned and smiled into her brown eyes. If Larry, in his turn, should fall in love with Anne, what of Linda then? Linda was a sportswoman; more than that, she was a good sport, thought Jameson, and permitted himself to dream under the arching blue sky.

In the office that quiet Sunday afternoon Eaton and Anne were working together. A long-distance call came through for him and Anne listened to his terse answers:

"No, I can't possibly . . . No, I'm leaving for Washington tonight to be gone three days. . . Mr. Sanders is out of the question. He has to carry on here."

At last he hung up and turned to Anne. "How can I go to Chicago and be in Washington at the same time?" he asked her.

SHOOK HIS HEAD

He shook his head, frowning, and went on. "Air mail won't do. There's a hitch in the tentative plans I sent out to the Lawson Lock people. Somebody has to explain it to them. Lawson is convalescing from the 'flu.' He can't come here. He doesn't think anyone in his outfit understands English, apparently, so he won't send a substitute. Sanders would do but he can't leave."

He ran his hand through his thick hair and stared at Anne. She'd been with him the better part of a year; he had come to trust her absolutely. She knew how to think for herself, and for him. She'd been over the Lawson Lock plan a dozen times with him.

Anne waited.

Suddenly he asked:

"Look here, Miss Murdock, could you go?"

She had been thinking: If he asks me to go; wondering if he considered her capable. Yet his question came as a shock and brought with it a thrill of pure delight with an increased sense of power. She nodded, grave eyes intent on his.

"Of course, I'll go," she said.

And Eaton thought, still watching her:

"Of course she would, the darling!" said Eaton to himself.

Despite Anna Murdock's vow to keep her head in the dangerous game she begins to play with her employer, she finds herself steadily becoming more woman than worker—in Faith Baldwin's next installment.

Plane Balks Girl's Parachute Record

New York, April 28 (INS)—Carrying two parachutes and a pair of water wings, Miss Frances Reed of this city, failed in an attempt to break the world's parachute jump altitude record at Roosevelt Field yesterday.

The water-wings, it was explained, were to save her should she come down on water. The Stinson cabin monoplane in which she took off could climb no higher than 14,200 feet and there she jumped. The record is 16,430 feet. It took her 15 minutes to come down five miles away, where she smashed into a fence, injuring her mouth.

Walraven's Daughter Dies After Fall

Chicago, April 28 (INS)—Regaining consciousness only long enough to moan "Mother, mother, do you know I'm hurt?" Marian Janice 21-year-old daughter of Earle C. Walraven, wealthy Palmolive-Peet Co. official, died from the effects of her apartment room fall yesterday.

Apparently the girl had lost her balance on a low radiator in her room in attempting to pull down the shade and had fallen.

GIRL UNAFRAID -:- By Gladys Johnson

CHAPTER 44

To Ardeth the loneliness was harder to bear after that glimpse of Ken and the baby.

In the daytime it was not so bad. Then she was busy with the shop and the customers. But at night—when Ah Ling had slipped into her smart sports coat, pulled her new beret over the marcelled waves of her hair and departed for her Chinatown home, then the gray specter of loneliness crept in to fill the small, quiet store.

The big chair under the lamp spoke of Ken. . . . She did not like to see Tom sitting there when he called on her in the evenings.

Many nights now, when she lay staring wide-eyed into the dark, listening to the mice scampering in the store room. To the footsteps of some late wanderer passing the door. Seeing the first gray traces of dawn creeping through the little alley window.

Loneliness . . . almost tangible . . . filling the shop like a dread presence, driving her out to walk the streets like a homeless thing.

When the dark mood struck it had no pity. Nothing could lighten it. Tom's clumsy kindnesses filled her with secret exasperation. No comfort in Mary Eastwood's blunt common sense. No company in Carolyn Forsythe's prim, bright home.

She wandered through the dark like an exile, her heart swelling with unshed tears.

Why had this dreary emptiness fallen to her lot? she asked herself in hot rebellion. Why had an unhappiness struck like a blight across these warm young years, rendering them sterile and forlorn?

She had the desperate need of clinging to something. Of belonging. It was this, perhaps, which sent her one night, wandering through the old neighborhood of the Harrison flat.

Not since that stormy night two years ago had she been here. Fell st. . . . the Fell st. of her childhood—dinger than ever. . . .

The corner grocery store with cellar steps guarded by an iron rail where she had hidden in hide and seek games with Neil. Filled as always with sodden newspapers and rubbish . . . Rows of wooden houses, shabbier, more weather-beaten than she remembered them. The corner where Ken had always stopped the car. Down there—in the middle of the block in grey ugliness, the Harrison flat. Long bleak windows. The warped wooden steps.

The front door, banded with panes of colored glass. She remembered how she and Bet had pressed their noses first to one pane, then another, looking out on a street turned uncannily purple, or murky red or a dismal and cold blue.

The doorway was like a black cove, thick with gloom. . . .

Her heart leaped. Someone standing there, fitting the key in the lock. Blur of white face. A man's form running down the stairs.

Neil's voice, shaking incredulous, "Ardeth . . . it is you!"

Dismay and smothered excitement pounding her heart. Out of the past . . . Neil! Neil, tall, before her! His white intense face—black eyes boring down into her own.

"I thought I was dreaming hearing your step on the sidewalk—I'd know it anywhere. I listened for you so long. . . ." Then, with smothered force, "Why are you here, Ardeth? Why did you come?"

His very force repelled her as it had always done. She found herself repenting the whim which sent her back here into the past. Her tone was defensively light.

"Oh—just taking a walk to get the cobwebs out of my brain. I'm indoors so much now, you know. Just happened to find myself walking down this way—"

A breathless silence when each studied the other. A thrill went through the girl at the dynamic force of him. Like—yet changed from the Neil she remembered. Black hair falling in a heavy shock over his white forehead. Black eyes looking from straight black brows.

She found herself suddenly eager to get away. Fumbling with her purse. Trying to rebutton her glove.

"So you came back, Ardeth—" Neil was saying softly.

She tried to treat it lightly. "They say the murderer comes back to the scenes of his crime. What do you hear of the Harrisons, Neil?"

He told her, impatient at the turn she had given the conversation.

Bet was engaged. Going to be married next spring. Tom had hurt his hand—they had been afraid of blood poisoning, but he was all right now. Aunt Stel had gone up on the river with Fan and Paul for the last school vacations.

And all the time the man's burning black eyes were drinking her in, drawing her down into his heart as though he would never let her go.

"You'll come in Ardeth? Granny's heart would be broken if she knew you'd come by without coming in to see her."

She wanted to refuse. She was suddenly filled with panic. She crushed it down and went into the dark house with him, feeling the years drop away at the remembered smell of the musty hall. Filled with the ridiculous fancy that she was walking into a trap.

LARGEST EVENING
CIRCULATION IN NEW ENGLAND

Hoover Has No Faith in the Wisdom of the Masses Nor in Their Ability to Govern

THE PRESIDENT is determined to force Congress and the Senate and the people to do HIS will.

He is determined to jam the League Court down their throats.

He instructed Stimson to agree with Foreign Naval Powers to scrap five of the large type American cruisers for whose construction Congress had voted, and substitute small cruisers UNSUITABLE FOR OUR NAVY'S NEEDS.

After the Stock Market had been properly shaken out and investors prepared for the purchase of bonds, J. P. Morgan and Owen D. Young went to Europe via the White House, and returned to the White House to report to the President the plan of unloading the German Reparation Bonds on American investors.

Back in November President Hoover had Stimson secretly negotiate with M. Claudel, French Ambassador, with regard to "IMPLEMENTING" the Kellogg Pact—putting teeth in it.

Stimson tried to insert the teeth at the London Naval Conference by announcing his country was ready to sign a "CONSULTATIVE PACT," a left-handed military alliance, with the European Powers.

President Hoover was a League of Nations champion in 1919, and as a Democrat he campaigned for the United States to enter the League WITHOUT RESERVATIONS.

There is every reason to believe that the chief foreign policy of the President today is to slip us into the League—or its equivalent—under some guise that will prevent us from knowing what has really happened to us.

Herbert Hoover has declared himself to be a Democrat, and has declared himself to be a Republican; but he is in reality an autocrat.

He is by nature, or because of his long experience abroad, out of touch with the basic principles of our American institutions.

He does not sympathize with the Democracy of Jefferson or the Republicanism of Lincoln.

He believes in the rule of an aristocratic few.

He has a profound distrust, if not a contempt, for the opinion of the common people.

He expressed it in typical Hoover fashion in an article written by him some years ago.

In it he said:

"ACTS AND IDEAS THAT LEAD TO PROGRESS ARE BORN OUT OF THE INDIVIDUAL MIND. THE CROWD ONLY FEELS; IT HAS NO MIND OF ITS OWN WHICH CAN PLAN . . . POPULAR DESIRES ARE NO CRITERIA OF REAL NEEDS, WHICH CAN BE DETERMINED ONLY BY DELIBERATIVE CONSIDERATION, BY EDUCATION, BY CONSTRUCTIVE LEADERSHIP."

He has neither faith in the wisdom of the masses nor in the ability of the people to govern.

After the League Court referendum in the McCormick-Deneen Senatorial contest had shown that the REPUBLICANS of Illinois were against the Court by over 200,000 votes, it was typical of Hoover to tell the D. A. R. in Washington that—

"In all the discussion as to participation of the United States in this Court there are FEW PERSONS who do not agree as to the necessity and desirability of such a court."

The votes of the majority of the citizens simply do not count in Mr. Hoover's mind. The majority that counts with him is the majority of the little group around Mr. Hoover, pledged to get the United States into the League Court and eventually into the League.

It is very important for the American people to understand these characteristics of Mr. Hoover, lest the country be plunged into some irreparable misfortune.

It is a noteworthy fact that the man who thinks he has the most perfect wisdom and the highest inspiration generally lacks those very qualities and also lacks the judgment to recognize in himself the human weaknesses and insufficiencies which all men have.

When Socrates was called the wisest man in Greece he concluded that the reason why the oracle had so designated him was because he was a fool and had the wisdom to know it, while others were fools and did NOT have the wisdom to realize it.

The wisest man is the man who realizes his own limitations and recognizes the fact that the nearest approach to perfect wisdom lies in the mass opinion of the whole people.

Tell WHO, WHERE, WHY and HOW MUCH, Mr. Warner!

The people of Boston are looking to Attorney-General Warner for a clear-cut, decisive and fearless report to the Legislature, on his investigation into the Garrett situation.

The people will be satisfied with nothing less. Mr. Warner's analysis of the vast amount of evidence conclusively showing graft and corruption MUST point the way to the cleaning up of the police department that is so urgently needed.

The attorney-general is not the type of man to resort to subterfuge and juggling of words in such a critical situation. He has had skilled and honest men as his assistants. He has had ample funds at his disposal to make his investigation thorough. His own legal knowledge, and that of his aides, has been broad enough to show him the way of arriving at the truth. Therefore, there can be no excuse for not returning a report that will be the guiding light in the inevitable scouring of the city's dark corners.

The public has a right to insist, AND DOES INSIST, upon a reorganization of its police department. Grafting officials must be not only ousted. They must be made to pay the penalty for their misdeeds. Incompetent and negligent commanding officers must be supplanted by courageous men who will not hesitate to maintain honesty and discipline in the department under any and all circumstances.

There must be no more Garrett cases. There must be no more such instances of glaring inefficiency as has been shown by Commissioner Wilson. There is no room in the Boston police department for captains or for any official who countenances graft or slackness in the men under him. The honest and faithful members of the department are entitled to have commanding officers who are an honor to the uniform, rather than a disgrace.

The Warner report must be a master mind's analysis of a maze of facts, hearsay, and significant events.

It must tell WHO, WHERE, WHY, and HOW MUCH!

Punishing Wage Earners

Legislature Should Remedy Situation

The wealth of Massachusetts has enormously increased since the State income tax law was put on the books thirteen years ago.

The four classes of income on which the tax is levied are now paying upon a value which is $525,000,000 in excess of the value then known to exist.

Earned incomes are paying on a value which has exactly doubled in those thirteen years.

Now, the earners of small incomes know that their wages and salaries have not doubled in that period. They know, too, that the cost of living has increased to them by possibly sixty per cent.

Yet they are still paying the same high rate of taxes which was established at the outset.

Everybody in Massachusetts realizes that the mighty expansion of wealth has been very largely through the possession of intangible personal property.

And one of the numerous State commissions which has recently studied the vexatious and unjust income tax laws has declared that "a very large portion of the intangible personal property owned by inhabitants of Massachusetts escapes or is exempted from all State or local taxation under our present laws."

The income tax law in its origin never commanded the support of the progressive and fair-minded people of this State. They knew it for what it was—a scheme to throw taxation from the holders of intangible wealth upon real estate and the earners of small incomes. The evidence discovered by that commission, if a commission were necessary at all, corroborates that the scheme has fulfilled its purpose.

Thirteen years or thirteen minutes, either, is too long a time for taxation inequalities to be borne in a state whose freedom was born out of a war against unjust taxation.

The Legislature should not let its present session pass without remedying this evil condition. REDUCE THE RATE TO THE EARNERS OF SMALL INCOMES AND INCREASE THE EXEMPTIONS TO THEM. In that way lies relief.

H. G. Wells Writes on "The Science of Life"

IN COLLABORATION WITH PROFESSOR HUXLEY AND GEORGE P. WELLS

We now turn back to the three southern continents and their three wholly different sets of animal inhabitants.

H. G. Wells

First comes Australia and its marsupial menagerie. During most of the late Mesozoic Era (IV), Australia was connected with the rest of the world.

Whether there existed a land-bridge to Asia or, as many are inclined to believe, to Antarctica and thence again up to Cape Horn, or whether, as Wegener thinks, it once formed a part of a great southern continent which was later broken up, we must leave to the geologists to settle; in any case it is immaterial to us.

We know that true placentals did not appear on earth before the late Cretaceous (IV C), that the earlier, Mesozoic (IV), mammals were akin to monotremes and to marsupials, though mostly even more primitive in type, and occurred all over Eurone and North America.

All of them, however, were very small, and they showed little variety in their ways of life.

Some time in the Cretaceous (NC) these primitive marsupial and monotreme mammals penetrated into Australia; the landconnection between it and the rest of the world was broken before any placentals could enter.

Australia thus became the marsupial's Ark—with the important difference that they did not stay merely a year and ten days in it like the animals in Noah's Ark, but over fifty million years. Indeed it was to them like a combination of Ark and Promised Land.

For, during that long time they flourished and were able to give rise to new and varied forms of life, not found in any other region of the world.

Now that modern man has introduced placentals into Australia, the marsupials are no match for them, and are dying out. The development of the varied marsupial life of Australia was due to the biological protection.

Competing imports were barred. Home industries flourished, but their products never came up to those resulting from a more vigorous competition.

South America, on the other hand, was open to the north in early Eocene times (V A1), but only for a short time.

This allowed representatives of some, but not all, of the early placental mammals to enter, and the connection was then broken, not to be re-established till the close of the Miocene (V C1), perhaps thirty million years later.

Similar results followed in both regions—the development of creatures elsewhere unknown, the flowering denied to primitive types in more strenuous regions.

The chief factor contributing to the local evolution of South American types was the total absence of carnivores and of true ungulates. The only flesh-eating mammals were primitive marsupial types, all now extinct.

The absence of more specialized beasts of prey permitted a great number of sluggish, large and inoffensive creatures to come into existence, such as armadillos and their allies, sloths, big rodents like capybaras and viscachas, opossums and anteaters; while the absence of hoofed developed or browsing runs running machines, the true ungulates, permitted other stocks more or less adequately to fill the gap thus left in life's economy.

We have already mentioned the remarkable if slightly inferior imitation of horse-evolution achieved by what we may call the pseudo-horses, the Litopterna.

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McINTYRE

New York, April 28—Diary of a modern Pepys: Betimes to my desk to finish a screed, but spent most of the time twigging about the fogs of London with the maid, who is very British. Then to casting my accounts and pleased I can pay my debts and have a trifle to spare.

To the circus with Genevieve and Courtney Ryley Cooper, and Mary Garden, whom I had never seen before, sat in a nearby box. Talked, too, with John Ringling, who visited us awhile. Then to Rube Goldberg's home and a crowd of syndicate gentlemen there talking rag, tag and bobtail.

In the evening with my wife and Grace and Ed Nolan to Vincent Lopez's penthouse party for Florence Simrell, of Lexington, and home late, walking along Broadway and surprised at the huge crowds attending midnight performances of the moving picture shows.

James Montgomery Flagg was the first comic strip artist. He drew Nervy Nat when 19, and it ran for many years. Flagg is one of the most versatile of artists, having expressed his talents in many mediums—pen and ink, portraits in oil, crayon, and landscapes in water color. He has authored many plays and playlets, too.

• • •

Flagg is the oldest illustrator in point of service, his first published drawings having appeared in St. Nicholas when he was 14, and has appeared in magazines here and abroad for 40 years. The artist bears striking resemblance to collar ad lads, has the longest eyelashes outside of Hollywood, and his mighty pompadour is bright with the legends to which he perpetually adds.

Perhaps the best but least known of Flagg's originals is propped up inconspicuously in his West 57th st. studio. It is a portrait of Lincoln and one stares at it in amazement. It shows the emancipator thoughtfully gazing out of a White House window into the purple night. People who see it find a choke coming into their throat for few paintings symbolize so much agony, hope and patheo. Flagg has a fistful of talents which show vision, taste and imagination. He is a great guy.

Decorating bathrooms has reached a new splendor. Experts command high sums if they can give the bath original touches of grandeur. An arty magazine describes Mrs. Ring Lardner's in this fashion:

"The bathroom is in flowered paper, robin-egg blue woodwork, lavender sash curtains parting to show a glimpse of sand and ocean, lovely handmade glass bottles with blue stoppers, a vari-colored rug and especially designed towels in lavender."

And on top of this comes news of a rich man's shavorium—a little alcove in white marble off his bath. There is a deep cushioned chair before a huge mirror, to which are attached many side mirrors. There is a rack for safety and old-fashioned razors. A shelf for brushes, lotions and powders and a rubberized contraption fitting over the face to give the comforting stimulation of hot towels.

Jack Donahue tells of receiving a bill from his lawyer like this:

"For crossing the street to talk to you and discovering it wasn't you—$12."

And there is the Broadway lady to whom it is easy to say hello but to say good-bye—see her lawyer.

"You are invited," writes a friend, "to the housewarming of my penthouse. It will be different. Only cold glasses of milk and home-made cookies will be served and everybody will be expected to depart at midnight. Necking is prohibited."

Anyone wishing to contribute to my delinquency has got to make a better offer than that.

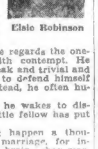
Listen, World!

By ELSIE ROBINSON

The Persevering Pin-Head

Don't underrate "single track minds." Don't underestimate the power of stupid, stubborn people with one idea, who can—and often do—put it all over the brilliant citizen with a million.



Elsie Robinson

Why? Because the stupid person does not scatter his energy or shift his viewpoint. He just keeps drilling away at one point and, given time, he'll wear his way through the toughest resistance. But the bright person has many interests and spreads his strength over them all. He regards the one-interest man with contempt. He considers him weak and trivial and makes no effort to defend himself against him. Instead, he often hurries him.

Then one day he wakes to discover that the little fellow has put it all over him.

You've seen it happen a thousand times. In marriage, for instance. Some big, brainy chap marries a little nit-wit. . . . A gnat of a woman who wants and sees only her own way. No heart. No intelligence. No imagination. Lazy. Worthless. Selfish and silly.

You couldn't consider such a person very formidable, would you? Neither does the big, brainy man when he discovers what he has picked. Usually he is pretty sick of his bargain, but he decides to stick. And he proceeds to give in to her petty demands. They don't amount to much any way—thinks he. Anything for peace. So he pushes her aside in his thoughts.

But the nit-wit lady isn't really pushed aside. She's pecking right away at her original purpose. Demanding this. Whining about that. Nagging over the other thing. Wearing him down—wearing him down. And presently the whole world realizes that the big man hasn't any more liberty than a trained flea and the nit-wit woman is running the whole show.

Why?

Because she knew what she wanted and went after it.

Why do the weak so often triumph over the strong? Why does some worthless, pesty member of a family lead the whole tribe around by the nose? Why does the wicked flourish and the righteous do a fade-out? That's why. They know what they want and they go after it.

Determination is dynamite. It isn't merely dynamite for the virtuous and wise. It's just as dynamitish in the hands of fools and sinners. Results are for the go-getters—regardless of the moral status. Don't despise the persevering pin-head. Copy his stuff!
